

10 best movies of all time

For the most accurate assessment, the following article will be based on a ranking list voted by the audience. Accordingly, the following top rated movies will be based on the IMDB list.

Ranking the best movies ever made is a pretty impossible task. First of all, no one in the world can see every movie that has been produced. Even if someone has done this feat, the appreciation is still subjective, because a movie that one thinks is great may not be appreciated by others. For the most accurate assessment, the following article will be based on a ranking list voted by the audience. Accordingly, the following top rated movies will be based on the IMDB list.

IMDB is still one of the websites providing information about the most popular movies on the Internet. IMDB's list of top movies aggregates works rated by millions of viewers. Although the list is always changing, the following top 10 movies haven't changed for years. Along TipsMake.com learn details through the following article!

Top 10 highest rated movies of all time

1. 10. The fight for life and death (Fight Club)

3. 8. The Pulp Fiction
4. 7. Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King (Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King)
5. 6. Schindler's List
6. 5. 12 angry men (12 Angry Men)
7. 4. The Dark Knight (The Dark Knight)
8. 3. The Godfather Part II
9. 2. The Godfather
10. 1. Shawshank Prison Redemption (The Shawshank Redemption)

10. The fight for life and death (Fight Club)

David Fincher is still one of the most talented filmmakers to this day. His projects often go into dark corners, but they are always appealing thanks to a perfectionist approach and unique style. Fight Club (Vietnamese name: The Hunger Games) is his most famous film and one of the most interesting films of the 1990s.

The film starring Edward Norton, as a man with a dull life. But things changed when he met Tyler Durden (played by Brad Pitt) and the two opened a club for adult men to duel with each other. Humor, brutal violence, and an unexpected ending will make you want to watch the movie over and over.

9. Good, evil, and evil (The Good, the Bad and the Ugly)

In the past, the West was the inspiration for Hollywood movies, but when the genre moved to Italy, everything changed forever. With a unique film style unlike anything the audience has seen before, The Good, the Bad and the Ugly (Vietnamese name: Good, evil, evil) is a typical work for this genre. .

The film tells the story of three men whose mission is to find the treasure buried in the civil war. The film helped popularize the Mexican Standoff trend (the image of a three-gun fight) still used in action movies today, becoming a star of Clint Eastwood and one of the most iconic films. All Time.

8. The Pulp Fiction

Quentin Tarantino is one of the most famous filmmakers of all time. His unique voice, extensive cinematic knowledge, and his tendency to blend hilarious comedy with brutal violence helped inspire a generation of filmmakers. Pulp Fiction (Vietnamese title: Crap) is considered by many to be his masterpiece, and it's hard to deny it.

The film alternates between different stories set in the underworld in Los Angeles. Tarantino picks out familiar crime stories and gives the characters their own special vortices. Unpredictable plot details with fast-paced, interesting dialogue supported by great music. All contribute to creating a classic.

7. Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King (Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King)

Few think that bringing the cult series Lord of the Rings of JRR Tolkien to the big screen is possible, but Peter Jackson proved it all wrong. With The Return of the King, Jackson released one of the best trilogy of all time, making the audience truly satisfied.

Jackson and his associates created emotional moments, along with some really great fight scenes.

6. Schindler's List

It's no surprise that Steven Spielberg's name appears on this list of the best movies of all time. This talented director has the ability to create films that are popular with many people.

Schindler's List (English name: Schindler's List) is a heartbreaking story about the real life of Oskar Schindler and his efforts to save Jews during the Nazi period. Besides the inspirational hero Schindler, the film achieved the greatest success when faithfully portraying the horrific Holocaust massacre. By haunting black and white footage, Spielberg has created a film that will remain in the minds of viewers for many years to come.

5. 12 angry men (12 Angry Men)

While most of the movies on this list are great epic works, 12 Angry Men (Vietnamese name is 12 angry men) is small when compared side by side. However, that does not detract from the effectiveness of this film. The film is placed almost entirely inside a jury room, when 12 men argue over a murder case to come to a conclusion: Whether the accused was convicted. With a single person claiming to be innocent, the film details the debate to arrive at the final conclusion regarding a person's life and death.

Although the context may seem dull, it helps viewers have intense emotions. Excellent filmmaking skills make the room seem more and more limited as the debate breaks out and the feeling of suffocation adds to the tense atmosphere. This is great evidence, proving that small-scale movies can make a big splash as well.

4. The Dark Knight (The Dark Knight)

Just before 12 Angry Men, the oldest film on this list, The Dark Knight, was released. The superhero genre may not get much acclaim from movie lovers, but Christopher Nolan's second film about Batman proves that filmmakers can deliver smart, raging movies. coated and thrilling on the subject.

The film details details of Batman's attempt to prevent Joker from destroying Gotham, while looking for someone who can take on the role of protecting the city. The film feels like an epic epic about crime, with some unexpected episodes and unpredictable twists. However, the film is best remembered for its enchanting performance by actor Heath Leger as Joker.

3. The Godfather Part II

The Dark Knight is one of the rare examples of how a sequel in a series can really become a movie with a deep impression on the public. Of course, the most famous example of this would be Godfather Part II. It seemed impossible for director Francis Ford Coppola to want his crime story to be popular at the time, but he proved it to be a very good idea.

Without Marlon Brando returning to his iconic role, the film tells the story of the young Vito Corleone, played by Robert De Niro, who truly blew his soul into his role. Along with great flashbacks, this sequel follows

Michael into the criminal world and his complex relationship with his brother Fredo. This is a brilliant continuation and a masterpiece in its own right.

2. The Godfather

The Godfather Part II is one of the most acclaimed movies of all time and still not the highest-rated of the three films in this series. That honor is for part 1. There is a lot of debate among movie fans about which series in this series is better, but it can be said that both parts are great achievements in film. .

The film is the story of the Corleone family, an Italian-American mafia family, struggling to maintain power, after Vito Corleone was nearly assassinated. The film has both violent, comical and emotional scenes. Not surprisingly, this is considered to be a film that inspired many filmmakers today.

1. Shawshank Prison Redemption (The Shawshank Redemption)

Not surprisingly, the highest-rated film is also one of the most popular movies of all time. You may think that the story set in a prison will not have many interesting moments, but The Shawshank Redemption (Vietnamese name is Shawshank Prison) became a very surprising story.

Based on a story by Stephen King, the film focuses on the friendship between two prisoners over the years in a prison. The relationship between the two men is one of the warmest friendships ever shown on screen and it makes the film a great moment with the best ending in film history.
