

10 Jewish principles of life, 3,000 years of value remain

The laws of the Jews, though they have been through time, are still true and apply successfully today. Let's take a look at 10 principles and laws of Jewish life

In modern society, life management skills are an indispensable skill of talented individuals in an internationalized environment. And the Jews were aware of this from 3000 years ago.

1. Learn how Jews teach children to communicate from a young age
2. Why do Jews always answer this question with another question?

1. Edison's thinking: Failure is a successful mother

Edison considered every failed test a harvest, because at least they proved that the test material or method was impossible.

Therefore, the incandescent incandescent lamp that has undergone more than 6,000 tests can succeed.

Start-up Jews always show a resilient will, no matter how many failures they encounter, they all think that these are the necessary experiences to succeed.

2. Matthew effect: Must definitely become a leader

If you want to keep the advantage in a certain area, then it is imperative to become a leader in that field. When you become a leader, even if the rate of return is the same, you can easily gain greater benefits than those in the same industry but weaker.

In entrepreneurial skills, once the Jews gain an advantage in certain areas, they will speed up stronger breakthroughs; When a strong opponent appears, they will go in a different way, finding out exactly their opponent's weaknesses and their advantages.

3. Occam razor law: Be as simple as possible!

Occam's law of razors tells us that: All things should be "as simple as possible" and not simpler.

Jews like to maintain the simplicity of things, grasp the basics, solve the facts, do not like to complicate things, so it can solve the problem quickly and effectively. more productivity.

4. The law of the clock: A person cannot have two commanders

Just have a watch you can know what time it is now. But when you use two watches at the same time, you can't determine the time. Two watches cannot tell a person more accurately.

In the method of business innovation, Jews think that it is impossible to simultaneously apply two different types of management, nor can simultaneously set up two different objectives.

One cannot leave two people at the same time, nor can each person choose two different types of value conception at the same time.

5. The law of wooden crates: How much water can a container contain is the shortest wooden board

Every business has its own weaknesses. It is these steps that make businesses have a lot of idle human resources, even waste, do not promote the worthy effect.

The Jews thought that every dollar must revolve around a focus, each of which must revolve around the central goal of the effort. Turn around a central circle, forming a circle that suits you best.

6. The law of alcohol and dirty water: Timely clean up the negative element

A spoonful of water poured into a bucket of dirty water, you get a bucket of dirty water. Pour a spoonful of dirty water into a bucket of wine, what you get is still a bucket of dirty water!

Jews do not compromise on members or things that sabotage the organization, they argue, it is necessary to promptly deal with them even before these negative elements start to sabotage.

7. Horse fly effect: How lazy the horse is, just having a horsefly bite will be spirited

The horse was stunned by the fly before it could run faster, no matter how lazy it was. We are the same.

In the method of entrepreneurship, the Jews thought that only when someone chased them, did they not dare to let loose and try to strive. From this perspective, we should thank our competitors, because they are the best bell for us to complete.

8. Goblet thinking: Do not follow the trend, learn to think independently

Goby fish take a healthy fish as a natural leader, even though the goby's action is chaos, the other gobies still blindly run as before.

From a young age, Jews had to learn to think independently, not blindly following the trend.

9. Florence Thinking: The goal is like a lighthouse, bright enough to guide ships

The goal must be "visible", the life of the person who cannot see the goal will lose the direction of advance, even if you are full of energy, it is useless.

Jews always emphasize the meaning of precise positioning, clear goals, all revolve around fulfilling the goals that are carried out.

10. Relative thinking: There are no things that can exist independently

Between interacting things, they will not exist independently.

In the method of entrepreneurship, the Jews thought that there would be no cake falling from the sky, whatever it was that looked good was its cause, there was no chance of ungainly gratitude leave you.

You finished reading the article "10 Jewish principles of life, 3,000 years of value remain" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.