Below are moments you probably shouldn't text, instead call or meet face-to-face.

When you need to express your emotions

Emoji or funny icons cannot replace words when we need to express emotions.

When parting

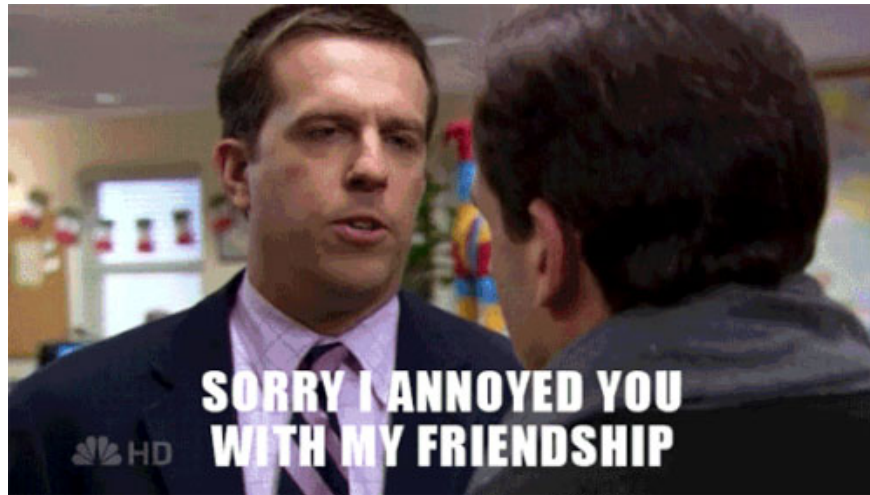

Unless it's a love affair online at a very far distance, it's best to meet once to say goodbye.

When someone fired

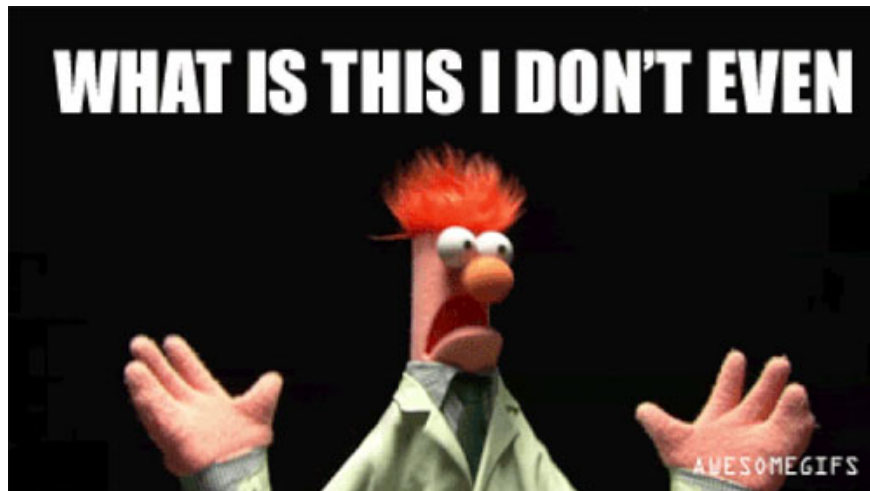

Although this is about firing employees through text messages or Facebook, do you think it's reasonable to do so?

When they don't text back

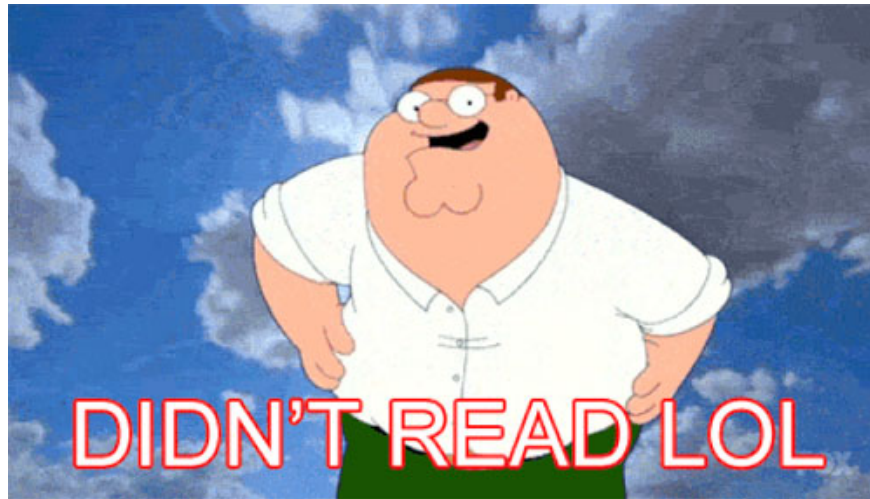

Regardless of who you message, if the reply rate is only 1/5 or lower, you should stop immediately.

When in an emergency situation

The message is not something you should hope for in an emergency or a life-threatening situation.

When there are many things to say

Nobody likes to read long messages like letters.

When there is very important news, life can change

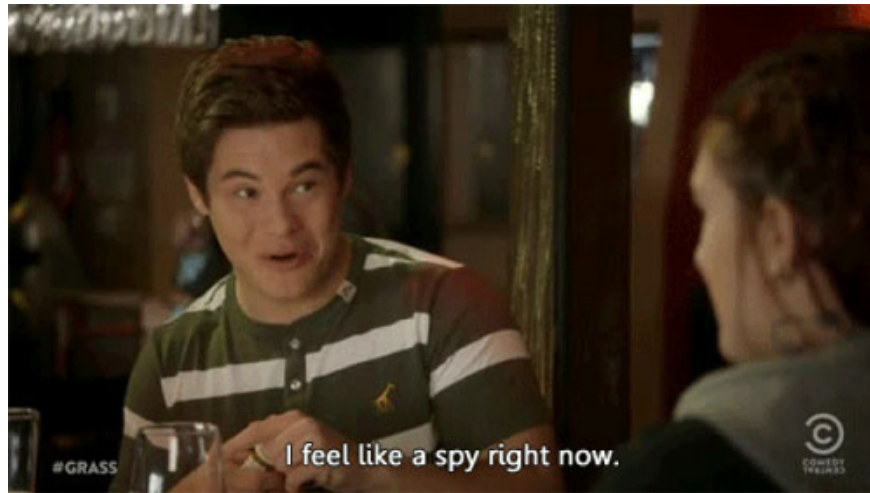

If you are pregnant, have just been betrothed or you risk getting cancer, don't share such great news via text messages.

When a loved one or someone loses

At such times, the message cannot be effectively condoned.

When exchanging illegal things

Perhaps no one wants to leave traces of illegal things.

When drunk alcohol

It's not easy to control what you do when you're drunk but this is also the time when you shouldn't text
