1. Top 11 reasons why we are getting a little bit more
2. 7 tips to deal with work stress
3. 3 types of friends you should have in your life

A person's belief system is often a direct reflection of the people they spend time with each day. To ensure a positive social environment is built for success, make sure that the people you trust the most do not suffer from what your friends don't actually do. Please refer to 10 things "true" friends never do !

1. Don't talk behind your back

A friend who really knows how to separate from false stories about you. If someone deliberately releases false information or shares the secrets you've ever asked them to keep, then surely that person is not really worth your trust.

2. No offense, sarcasm on personal matters

A real friend will never put you in an awkward situation. They talk to you kindly, not using cruel, sarcastic words. They focus on similarities instead of your extraordinary differences. They care about your quality, not the shortcomings you have.

3. Don't start a meaningless debate

A friend really knows where to stop, they know how to argue and how humble. If you are falling into a meaningless debate, behave well and respect your friends. Friends should really be willing to accept the nature of a person, whether they agree or not. Each of us has friends who disagree with them (actually it should be, because things will be more diverse). But if you need to argue, respect each other.

4. Never interrupt you

A true friend will not let himself be obsessed because they have no interest in your feelings. A friendship of mutual respect cannot exist when a person keeps talking while no one is listening.

5. Do not prevent you from pursuing goals

He is willing to give personal opinions if they feel these things are good for your personal growth. They don't do it in an arrogant or obnoxious way, instead, they offer helpful, constructive and inspiring advice to make you do better.

6. Don't disregard your past

Friends really don't care about your past, no matter what it is. If you are brave enough to reveal your hidden secrets, your real friend won't think anything about you. Instead, they will comfort and help you, expressing their appreciation for your actions.

7. Do not abandon you in any case

A real friend will be smart enough to know that taking a friend to a party they don't know about, then letting them be alone is not thoughtful ( especially if that friend is a person live inwardly ). He never let you go alone when he suddenly met his lover on the street. All 3 people will go out together happily, they will always find ways to drag you into the conversation so you don't feel lonely and heartbroken.

8. Not jealous of your success

A true friend will not waste time to envy the good things that come to you. They know that they should be happy with the success of others rather than pouting and shouting " Why don't they choose me? ". Take less lament and work harder.

9. Don't judge or try to change who you are

A friend really understands that it is silly to change someone when they are in turmoil. A friend can really admit that they are not as perfect as their appearance so they never ask for perfection from others. Therefore, it is absurd to expect anything perfect from others. You may not be perfect, but you are good enough and don't let someone say that you should be different.

10. Don't underestimate your friendship

Will Smith once said: "If you are absent when I get stuck, don't expect to be present when I'm successful".

A true friend does not think that friendship exists for a short time, can put it aside when there is no value, but always respect that relationship.

A true friend not only cares about mediocre pleasures like drinking, playing golf, walking on the beach or joining dance clubs, but they are willing to help you in the most difficult period, such as the pain of losing a loved one, losing a job or breaking up a relationship.
