Saving is something everyone wants to do to have a more comfortable life in the future. But if you want to save a lot of money, you will have to sacrifice and change some things, including hobbies or daily routines.

Savings seem to be a very difficult problem but the reality is not as complicated as you think. In the opinion of many millionaires and super-saving people, it is important that you create a clear financial plan and for beginners, consider how to cut expenses in the article. this.

Again a fairy tale from ancient times; surely we all want to grow up to be an adult and have an impressive amount of money in a bank account so we can start doing everything; from mortgage to a night out without worrying about being 'empty'? But in reality that dream will never come true.

I, the author of the article, will never forget the first day I told my mother that I wanted to move out after I graduated from university. She was extremely supportive of this decision, but then she gently told me to sit down and said that I needed to give a specific budget: 'Write down and compare what you will have to spend when living separately'.

At that time, I thought this would be easy. After moving to a new home, my friends came to my new home to see, which meant I would have to save money for meals and other expensive entertainment. In fact, even if only the preliminary costs: rent, utilities and other expenses are expected, I soon realize I have no more money for other things. So, I decided to learn how to save before being able to move out.

And what will I do? I do not want to give up social activities and friendships but do not want to remain in a state of empty pockets.

Do not worry! Here are 10 ways to save you money without having to cut down on your friends.

1. Do not order main dishes

I always pack leftovers when I go out to eat, this is a way to help me save money and not waste food. When dining with friends, choose dessert or appetizer as a meal to cut 20-50% of the amount for a meal. This will be fun if your friends do the same. At that time, going to eat anywhere was like a snack restaurant.

You just need to keep in mind the restaurant you will visit . While most places are happy to accept payment, some places offer the minimum amount you need to spend or even include sharing fees. This information can be found on the menu or previewed on the website.

2. Drink first at home

If you're going to the bar to meet friends, drink first at home. If you still want to drink more, go for a drink because the bars increase the price of alcoholic drinks. Don't drink too much when driving!

It takes a lot of time to get used to this because you have to practice self-control. You will surely be tempted to order more drinks at some special bars. But remember your financial goals when your desire arises.

3. Break the rules

I would not recommend leaving the familiar theater but you can keep an eye on the price list for popcorn and candy there. Buy a pre-snack and hunt for tickets at discounted websites like Swayback or Gift Card Granny. In addition, some theaters also offer discount coupons.

If you don't want to have a good food, why not try making a home cinema and enjoying with your friends?

4. Join a free concert

Most events that you participate in need help. Instead of wandering around on the web looking to buy tickets online, try accessing the " Volunteers - volunteer " section on the web or sending questions in the ' Contact us - see us ' section. If you need to convince your friends to go along, remind them that this is a good opportunity to meet the band if you are involved in staging a show. Of course, you will have to do manual work and will probably ' sweat ' but anyway you are here to jubilantly join the idol.

5. Buy and sell second hand stuff

This has been taboo before, but in recent years it has been a good choice. For some stores like ThredUp or Plato's Closet , you can sell your clothes for money and then buy other people's items.

This is a great way to exchange for trendy items instead of old-fashioned ones without spending too much money. Moreover, you will have a constantly changing wardrobe that makes you look like a regular shopping girl.

Remember, don't use this method for your favorite design items. This is really a good way to spend less money, but you won't get things that you think they're worth the money.

6. Keep the wardrobe simple

If you cover the wardrobe with basic items like T-shirts or jeans, you'll have plenty of options just by changing accessories. If you want to keep up with the trend of shopping, choose the jewelry you want to invest more than upgrading the wardrobe.

Recently, I have rearranged the wardrobe and divided into different outfits. If two items can be combined in many ways, I will put them together. This makes shopping easier and more economical because I will not accidentally buy back the items I have, and help me save time for morning preparation.

7. Sort by color chart

This tip comes with tip number 6. When arranging clothes into a uniform color scheme, you can be sure that all your items, including new ones, will work in harmony.

For example, you have a series of black, white or gray clothes, you will easily have a harmonious outfit. This does not mean that you have to have a pants-style wardrobe with 7 different color versions, just need to fit and neutralize colors so you don't have to buy a new shirt but need to have to buy another pair of shoes and a new pair of pants.

8. Pay attention to the meaning, not the price of the gift

Sometimes the cost and meaning go together, but you give people gifts that they really like more important than beautiful things that are only used once . I shop for holidays throughout the year to balance my finances. Buying a pair of early tickets will be less difficult when the festival season is close.

Besides, I personally like to use the evaluation method when shopping for others: " Does it cost anywhere ? " Or " What will they use it for? " I was given a picture frame by phase The pears are very beautiful and expensive, but I have nothing to do with it. It becomes extremely excessive and in the end, I gave it back to the person who needed it.

9. Use discount gift vouchers

If you already have plans for picnics, sometimes you can use coupons like cash from Gift Card Granny or Plastic Jungle . In addition, you can give it as a gift to your friends.

10. Create your own exchange events

If you possess skills that your friends admire like cooking or decorating, take advantage of it as an advantage. Spend a day teaching your friends about those things and you won't lose anything . This is a way for you to create an activity schedule, exchange it at no cost, it also makes you become a nice, lovely person in the eyes of your friends.

Like other things, saving money becomes easy if you get help. Tell your friends about the goals you want to achieve, ask them to cheer for you whenever you plan to make unwise decisions . It's not embarrassing to pay attention to your financial situation, is it?
