What is a free photo?

Some websites allow you to download images for personal use (eg as a wallpaper) but do not allow the use of commercial images (for cases such as business card printing, making website or poster design).

The following sites support or are full of CC0 images (a free license type) available for everyone to use. The owners of these images have allowed users to modify, edit and use their images without any copyright data response.

Two things related to common courtesy when using CC0 images are:

- 1) Although you do not have to acknowledge the effort of the person who created the image, you should do so to cheer the artist.
- 2) These websites usually have Donate pages (Donations) or notifications that appear on the screen. If you use that free image hosting site regularly, consider donating to these sites.

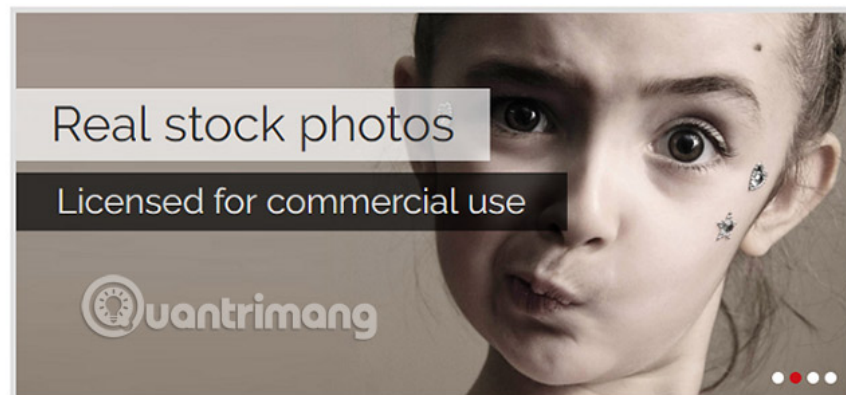

Here are the websites you need to remember to find high quality, non-copyrighted photos.
