After tricking users into installing, the app will automatically adjust to the country based on data collected from the device such as location and IMEI number. Next, they require the user to enter a phone number and email to gain full access to the app's features.

When the phone number is obtained, the application will automatically register for the SMS messaging service that costs 40 USD / 1 month without the user knowing.

If you have accidentally installed one of these applications, you should proceed to remove it immediately. Also, to avoid losing money in the future, you need to contact your mobile service provider to request cancellation of all registered SMS messaging services.

Google also received a report from Avast and quickly removed all these apps from the Play Store.
