

18 things you need to bring when you go for an interview

Before starting any interview, you should make sure you have prepared the necessary things to confidently score in the eyes of the employer. Bring the following 18 things to have the most successful interview.

Before starting any interview, you should make sure you have prepared the necessary things to confidently "score" in the eyes of employers. Bring the following 18 things to have the most successful interview.

1. Copies of curriculum vitae

You never know how many people you will meet during the interview. You should prepare a few copies of your resume in case someone forgets to bring your file. This also helps employers to be careful and professional from you.

2. A briefcase / bag

You should bring only one handbag. Women always have a handbag with them, but even men need a handbag when they are interviewed. If you have a large computer, you should choose a suitable bag, do not hold too many bags because you will look very messy, sloppy. Instead, put all your essentials in a single, simple handbag.

3. A notebook

There will be information that you need to save during the interview process to remember them. So bring a simple little notebook, it will help you a lot.

4. Two pens

Of course, you must bring a pen to record the information needed during the interview. But the employer may also need a pen to record reviews about you. If they don't have a pen, you can lend them and say that you have prepared other spare pens, surely the employer will have a good impression of your thoughtfulness.

5. Good self image

When you come to an interview, you have to make sure your image is always neat and tidy. Your hair, makeup, clothes, shoes . must be decent, in accordance with workplace standards. Do not dress and makeup too flashy, obscene or outdated.

6. Positive attitude

Employers like those who show them a positive attitude, enthusiastic, enthusiastic about their work. Keep smiling, confident throughout the interview and show them that you are ready for the job. Show that I really like this job and will do my best if I get it.

7. List of questions for employers

At the end of each interview, employers often give you the opportunity to ask questions about where you apply. This is your chance to express yourself. Be prepared at home with questions about the company's future activities and plans. Asking questions is a way for you to show them your capabilities and practical experience. Good questions will help you "score" in the eyes of employers.

8. List of referrals

You need to be prepared with information about the names, positions and relationships of those who introduce you to be ready to answer when the employer asks questions. This information will help employers see your ability and reputation in the eyes of those around you.

9. Good preparation

Think about the questions that employers can ask you and prepare the most appropriate answers in advance. This will help you not be surprised by difficult questions and show confidence in your answers. That will be a way to help you be appreciated by employers.

10. Turn off the phone

You should not answer the phone during the interview. You should turn off the phone ring, put it in a bag or in the car. Using the phone in the interview will make the employer find you seriously, not interested in this job and not respect the opposite person. You will definitely be disqualified immediately.

11. Drinking water, cough medicine, eating paper, hand sanitizer

You may suddenly have them, flu or sneeze, which will be detrimental to you when communicating during the interview. Prepare these small items to help you when needed.

12. A comfortable shoe

When you go for an interview, you should choose comfortable shoes in case you will have to walk a lot in the company. Take simple shoes to keep you active and convenient for the interview activities.

13. Look and smile

Employers can evaluate you through the actions in the interview such as: gestures, communication, glances, expressions . If you are not good at communication, just smile and smile. Sincere eyes are enough to help you

"score" in the eyes of employers.

14. Honesty

The important thing in an interview is honesty. If you have difficult things to say in the past, talk about it seriously and calmly. For example, when you have been fired at an old company, you can talk about the knowledge, experience you have achieved and everything that has helped you grow. Your attitude, emotions will reveal what truth you are hiding. It will be very complicated and awkward when employers find out you lie.

15. Ideas about work

Ideas in work are especially important, especially in areas related to design. No need for something too big, you just need to prepare simple ideas or a few small samples that you can bring. You should only talk about the job idea if the employer requires it. This helps you show them that you are well prepared.

16. The spirit is ready

What a company needs most in the candidates is their knowledge, experience and skills when applied to the job will bring high efficiency. Show them that you have the ability to match this job.

17. Long-term relationships

You should do an interview even if you know you will not get this job. But this is also an opportunity for you to build relationships with employers in the future.

If you do well in the interview, even if you are not admitted to this position, the employer may consider your case for other positions later. Therefore, the best thing to do is create a good impression and build relationships with them. Consider the interview as the first step in establishing a strong relationship in future related work.

18. Self-confidence

You will impress the employer when you are confident in your looks, abilities, and experiences. This helps you stand out from other candidates. Some people are humble and shy about talking about themselves so talk about yourself with the most pride and comfort. Employers will underestimate the candidates when they are not confident about themselves. Let them see that you are the one who deserves this job the most.

You finished reading the article "18 things you need to bring when you go for an interview" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.