

2 quick ways to check flight status on iPhone

Are you prepared to travel or who often travel there on flights? If you want to check the status of your flight on iPhone, follow the steps below!

Are you going to travel or who often "travel hi" here on flights? If you want to check the status of your flight on iPhone, follow the steps below!

There are two ways to track flights on devices running iOS. The first way has existed since iOS 9 was released and allows you to follow via Messages on the phone. The second way is that you can follow the Safari browser on iOS 11.

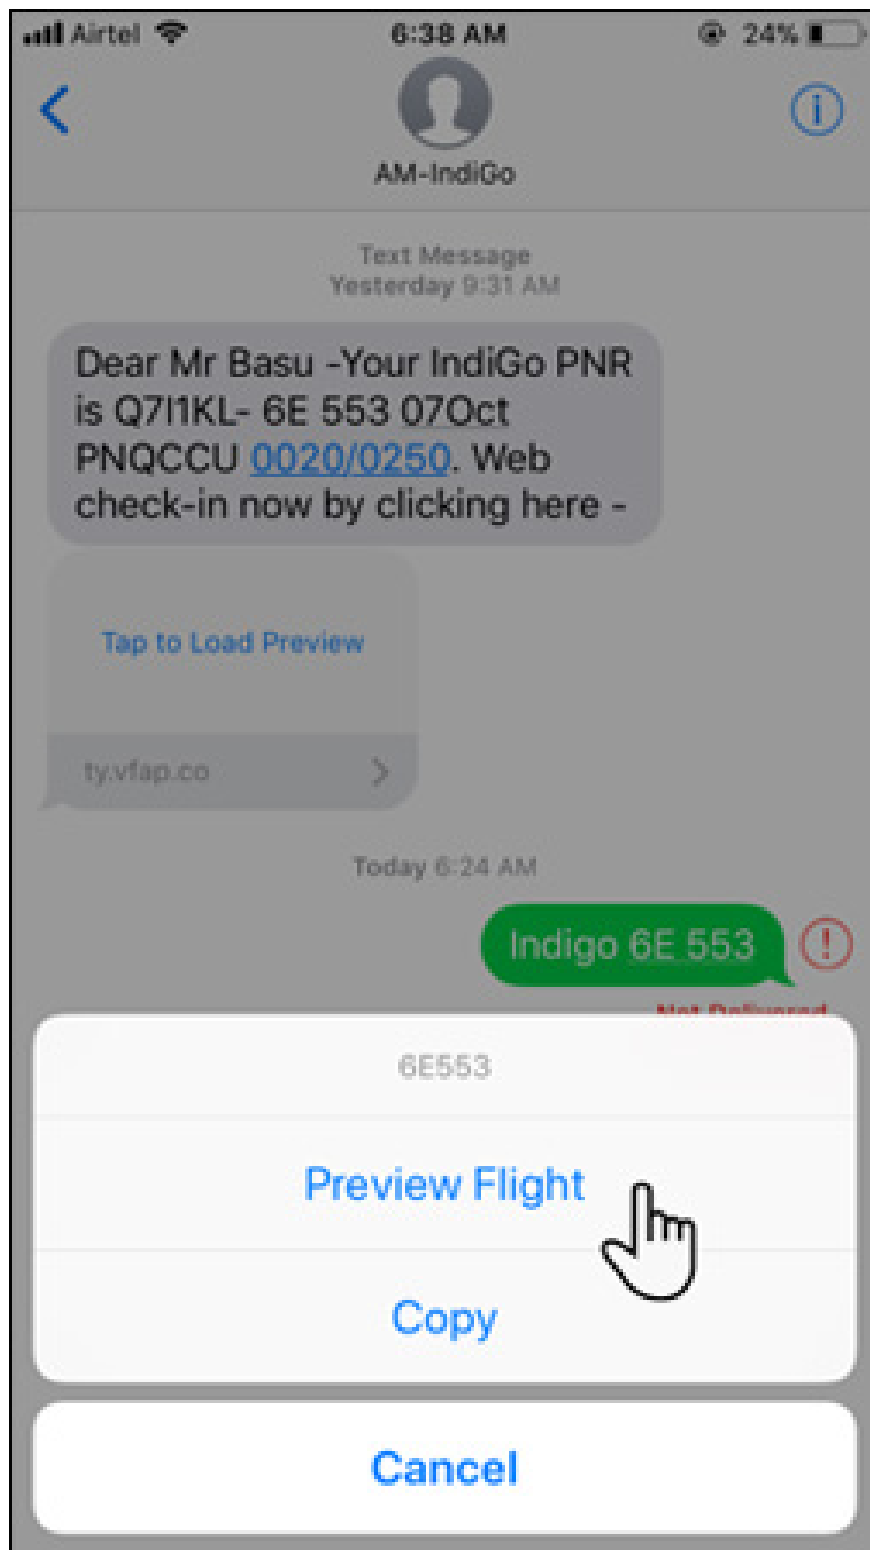

Flight tracking with Messages application

Suppose you receive a confirmation message from the airline you plan to travel with or someone sends you some flight information by text message. This will be a way for you to quickly find flight information in the next 24 hours.

First, open the Messages application .

Find the name and number of the mentioned flight, then select and hold the information. The Flight Tracker window will appear with flight details.

Also, just type, then send your name and flight number as a private message. Hold down the message until the pop-up window allows you to select Preview Flight .

This feature works with any iOS application such as Mail or Notes.

Track flights with Safari browser on iOS 11

The latest iOS 11 update allows you to track flight information with the help of Safari and Spotlight. iOS 11 will update your flight information and display it in the Spotlight widget.

Enter the airline name and flight number in the Safari browser address bar. The first proposal will directly navigate you to a map, helping you track the progress of your flight.

Flight tracking is really convenient, but we often overlook it. It is this monitoring that will help us plan our journey better and avoid minor problems such as traffic jams or bigger problems like missed flights.
