

4 ways to take photos with rain give the picture more romantic part

Taking photos in the rain is an extremely romantic and interesting scene for most of us. In addition to taking photos in the rain, the following 4 ways of taking photos will give you more enjoyable experiences.

On rainy days, most of us have a feeling of sadness, sitting silently looking through the window, beautiful raindrops, one of us would like to keep those moments to show off. Social network with friends to admire. Taking photos in the rain helps your picture more romantic and special, taking photos in the rain does not necessarily need to be taken during the rain, we can completely wait the rain and shoot or even shoot from inside home. So how to produce photos of rain that will attract a large amount of "like" and also want to "drop heart", please refer to the following ways:

1. Take a picture with the rain screen through the window

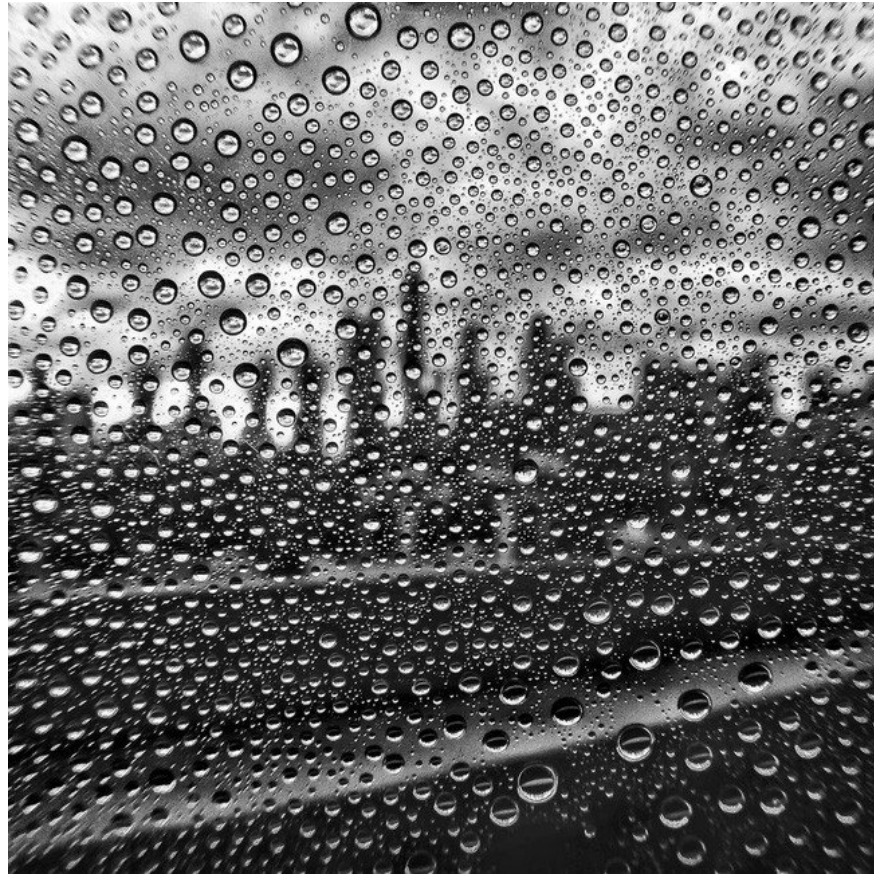

This is the easiest and easiest way to shoot, with the rain falling on the window will make the picture more fanciful. With this way of shooting, we can completely implement them right in the house. To create this picture all we need to do is choose the place where there is a large glass panel window and that glass door has a lot of rain. Please note that the landscape behind the glass is also important for a beautiful photo, which can be a city view from above (suitable for you to work on the office on a high-rise building) or the scene of people rushing to escape the rain.

To take this type of photo, it is very simple, we can take a picture or ask someone to take a picture for ourselves, hold the phone slightly closer to the window (about 10 - 20 cm depending on the line) and start focusing on the particles The rain is on the window. Please note because sometimes the phone will focus not according to your intent, so make manual focus or move the distance between the phone and the window glass until the raindrops are visible and The background behind is dimmed and can be captured.

2. Take a reflection on the raindrops

This will be an extremely creative way of shooting. Round raindrops like a mirror will reflect the space you are in into a tiny, extremely interesting image. This will be an opportunity for you to create a work of art with rain.

To take pictures like that, we need to place the phone lens very close (about 5 cm) with water particles so that it switches to close-up shooting mode, then press the water bead to focus on the screen and take a shot. Can be used with commercially available macro lenses to get closer.

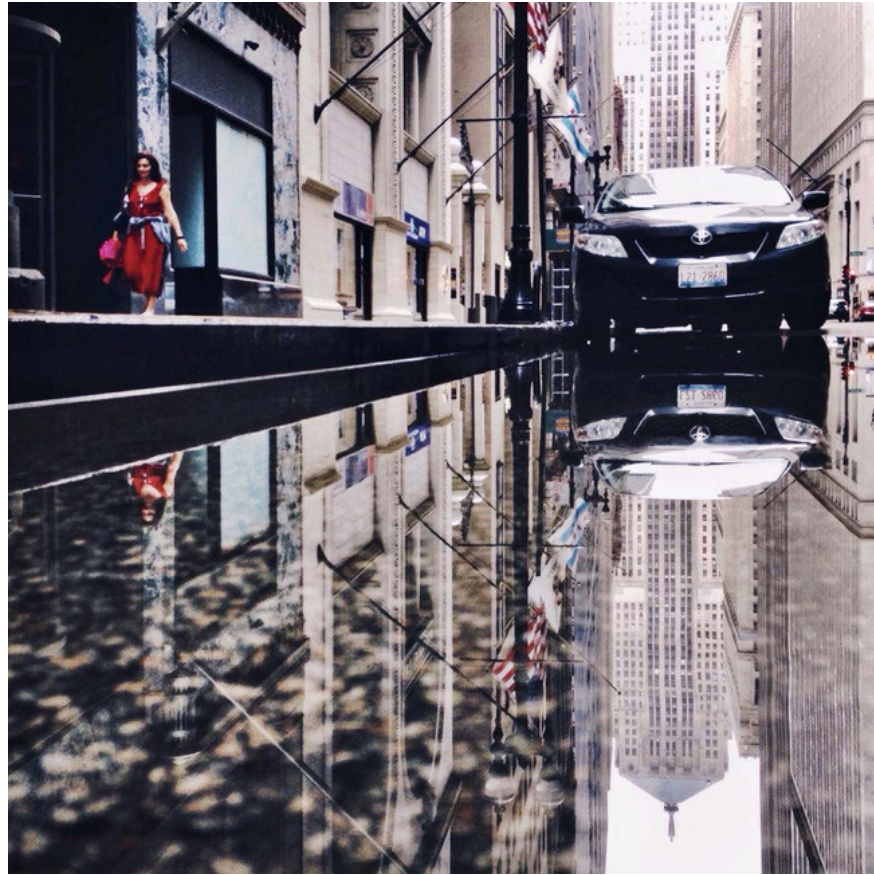

And to make the picture more lively, we can choose places with colorful and interesting reflections such as tall buildings, trees, cars or people.

3. Take photos with puddles

With this way of shooting is quite similar to the way of reflecting on raindrops, the only difference is that the size of the raindrop will be much larger. After heavy rains, in low-lying areas of the roads, there will often be very large puddles. So look for a place with clear water and clear water and it is important to have many scenes to reflect on the puddle that makes the photo more lively and interesting.

With this type of shooting you can spoil your creativity with different shooting styles and angles to create the perfect shot. People often choose low angle cameras to capture reflections of puddles, but we can absolutely choose high angles to produce more interesting images. Try out any angle you feel is most beautiful and satisfied.

We can choose the angle of view so that the reflected object matches the real object, or for the reflective object to fill the screen. Remember that no shooting is wrong in photography, it depends on the composition as well as the object you need to capture.

4. Take photos of the city after the rain

In addition to the above 3 ways of shooting, there is another way of shooting which is also extremely interesting for you that is shooting the city after the rain. After it rains, the sky is often very clear and the roads are filled with white pools of water that make the landscape become more bright and sparkling.

To help make the photo more sparkling and fanciful, you can shoot in the evening after the rain because we need to take advantage of the colored lights on the street to make the photo up.

Choose wet planes, such as sidewalks, and place the machine angle to see both the real object and its reflected light on the wet surface. After shooting, correct the cool color to show the coldness of the rain, the light element will balance the whole picture.

You finished reading the article "4 ways to take photos with rain give the picture more romantic part" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.