

48+ incredibly interesting websites that can help you learn all sorts of things.

Interesting websites not only entertain you but also give you opportunities to learn and experience new things. Below are some of the most popular websites today.

Interesting websites not only entertain you but also give you opportunities to learn and experience new things. Below are some of the most popular websites today.

What do you usually do in your free time? Watch movies, listen to music, browse social media, or read the news. All of these are fine and help you relieve stress effectively. However, if you want to find ways to "kill" your free time without wasting it, the following interesting websites will be helpful.

1. Relax with a bubble popping game at Mariemarie.

Mariemarie is a simple website; the homepage displays nothing special except a piece of cloth wrapped around bubbles. The creator of this website aimed to entertain and relieve stress, making it incredibly cute. Of course, it doesn't provide the same feeling as popping real bubbles. Firstly, the sounds of popping are too loud. Secondly, it lacks the tactile sensation, the most important reason why people enjoy "popping" those bubbles. However, this website has one huge advantage – the bubbles never end! You can play endlessly until you feel completely relaxed.

2. Create animated films online with Dvolver.com

Dvolver allows users to create their own online animations by selecting a range of characters, backgrounds, scripts, and typing in dialogue for the actors. While the number of templates is limited, once you've created your animations, you can send them to your friends via email. And one of the coolest features is that it's completely free; you don't even need to register to start making your own film.

Dvolver is a great tool for teachers to teach English to students from elementary school to university, regardless of their English proficiency level—beginner, intermediate, or advanced. Dvolver can be used to create a classroom activity or as an individual homework assignment. You can ask your students to create a film on any topic and then send the link to your email. You can then publish the links on your blog and have students vote for the best film in class.

Dvolver can also be used as a process review. You can ask students what the criteria for a successful film are. Alternatively, you can have students work in pairs and write a short commentary on their partner's video. When students engage with criteria and feedback from their peers, self-assessment becomes a logical step in the learning process and helps improve their performance. This is because they have to think about their own learning, articulate what they understand, and identify areas for improvement. This will help students become more aware of their strengths and weaknesses. By monitoring students' filmmaking process, you can also provide them with feedback and suggestions on what to do and improve.

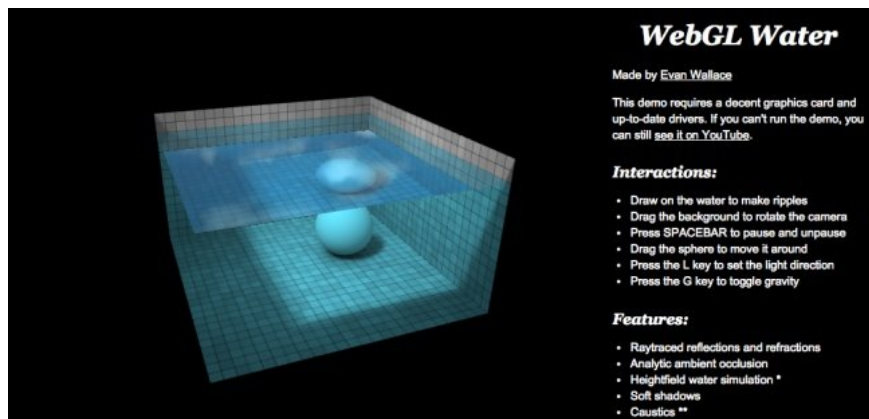

Dvolver can also be useful in teaching literature. You can use this tool to introduce a new chapter of a novel, short story, or play. This is great because it can make learning literature more engaging for your students, especially those who find the subject dull and boring!

3. Make a wish with WishPlus.com

If you've never had the chance to make a wish when a star falls, visit the WishPush website. The creator of this site says all you need to do is make a wish by clicking on a star. The website will congratulate you each time your star falls and let you try again. Just remember: Always believe that your wish will come true, and who knows, that virtual star might just make your dream come true.

4. Playing with water on Madebyevan.com's WebGL

The WebGL website features a small pool filled with water and a floating ball inside. It allows users to rotate the camera in different directions, adjust gravity, set the direction of light, and pause animations. Lift and drop the ball into the water to observe the splashing motion. You can also touch the water to see ripples. This is sure to make you feel more relaxed and help you forget about stress.

5. Enter your name and display your face on Turnyournameintoaface.com

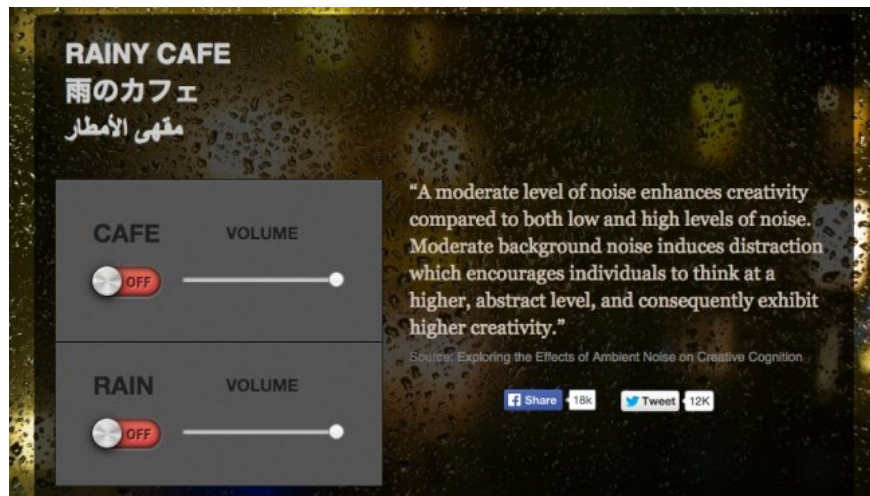

Turn Your Name Into A Face - this website is as simple as its name suggests. You just enter your name, and the website will turn it into a funny face.

6. Play with a ball on the BallPool

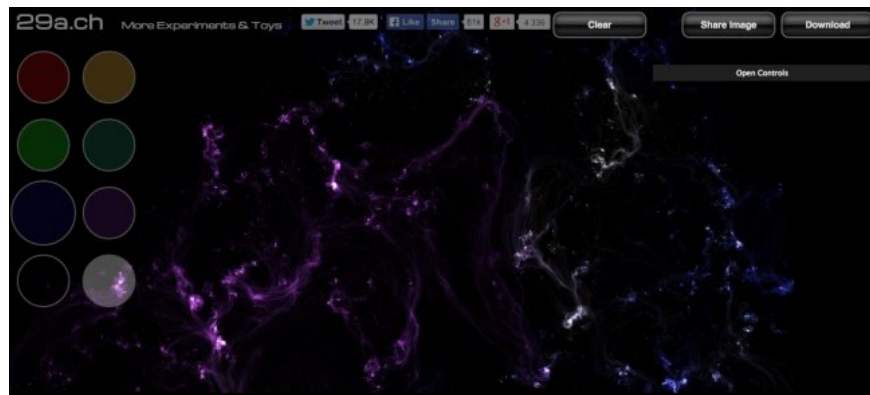

It's unlikely you'll spend more than two minutes on this site, but Ball Pool is a simple game that lets you move balls across the entire screen. This simple animated game is sure to provide you with a few minutes of fun and relaxation.

7. Listen to the sound of rain while sitting at a cafe with RainyCafe.com

Do you enjoy sitting in a cafe with a relaxing drink while listening to the sound of rain? If so, the Rainy Cafe website is perfect for you. On this website, you can choose what you want to hear: the cafe's noise, the sound of rain, or both. Simply set the volume level and enjoy.

8. Draw a neon swirl.

Neon Flames is a website that lets you create stunning neon swirls. With eight colors to choose from and a full set of parameters, this website is a great choice for those who want to experiment with different colors. Furthermore, you can save your creations by clicking the download button in the upper right corner of the screen.

9. Try the feeling of being a hacker with HackerTyper.com

struct group_info *groups_alloc(int gidsizesize){ struct group_info *group_info;
    int nblocks;
    int i;

    nblocks = (gidsizesize + NGROUPS_PER_BLOCK - 1) / NGROUPS_PER_BLOCK; /* Make sure we always allocate at least one indirect block pointer */ nblocks = nblocks ? : 1;
    group_info = kmalloc(sizeof(*group_info) + nblocks*sizeof(gid_t *), GFP_USER);
    if (!group_i

Simply press random keys on your keyboard and the code will be displayed on your screen. Get ready to impress your friends!

10. Do nothing and listen to the waves for 2 minutes with donothingfor2minutes.com

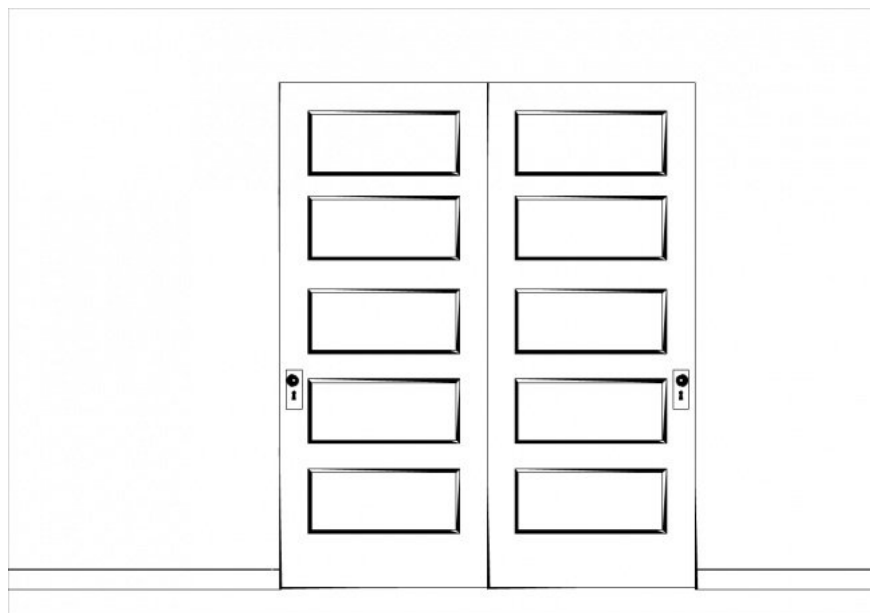

Nothing For 2 Minutes allows you to relax, escape the hustle and bustle of everyday life, and listen to the sound of the waves for 2 minutes. Remember that during this time you don't need to touch a mouse or keyboard; just look at the screen and listen to the waves. Try it and experience it for yourself.

11. Draw with sand on thisissand.com

This Is Sand is a unique website that creates amazing sand dunes. Click the left mouse button to create a sand stream, double-click for a continuous, steady flow. Surely, in just a few minutes you can create a stunning picture.

12. Close the door on biglongnow.com

This website, biglongnow, is designed for people who want to calm their nerves by slamming a door shut. Instead of slamming a door in real life and being stared at, visit this website and slam as many doors as you want.

13. Everything is OK with make-everything-ok.com

This website, make-everything-ok, has just one button designed to improve your mood with the meaningful message: " Everything is OK now ." Give it a try; it might just make you feel much better.

14. Gnoosic.com

GNOOSIC ✨ DISCOVER NEW MUSIC

Based on your choices, Gnod predicts you might like the music of

Blink 182

It looks like Blink 182 has upcoming shows:

Firefly Music Festival - 4 Day Pass	The Woodlands of Dover International Speedway Dover, DE	Thursday 6/16/2016 TBD	VIEW TICKETS
-------------------------------------	--	------------------------------	----------------------------------

Gnoosic is where you can find new music suggestions. It asks for three of your favorite bands and, based on your preferences, suggests an artist you might like. Then you have the option to "like," "dislike," or mark it as unfamiliar – this step further refines the results. This is really fun for music enthusiasts looking for a new musical adventure.
