5. DriverFinder - Software Providing Driver Warehouse For Your Computer

- + Great driver scanning tool
- + Controlled updates
- + No option to install all
- + No scheduler

DriverFinder is a basic tool that scans your Windows system and identifies drivers that are missing or need updating. And it can find the latest driver versions and install them.

However, there are a few downsides to this solution that should be mentioned. It doesn't have an install-all option, which means if you find out that your system needs twenty updates, you'll have to click twenty times to resolve each of them.

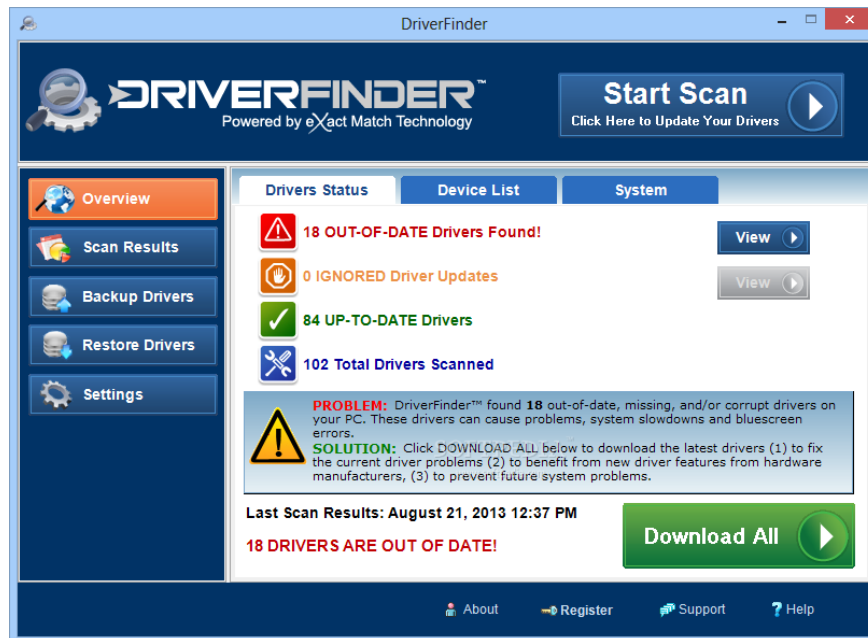

This is only an issue initially, as after you run it a few times, chances are it will only find one or two drivers that need updating per scan.

It also doesn't include a scheduler for automatic scanning, although you can have it run automatically when Windows starts.

Most of the drivers it sources directly from hardware manufacturers, so they are often free Driver update software that many people use today.

Free Driver update software can also backup all currently used drivers, ideal for those who need to reinstall the system immediately.
