

5 best free online video watermark removal tools

There are many ways you can accidentally leave a watermark on your video. For example, you might be using a free online video editing service that adds a watermark to your work.

There are many ways you can accidentally leave a watermark on your video. For example, you might be using a free online video editing service that adds a watermark to your work.

Luckily, removing them is quite easy. All you need to do is use the right online tools and you will have a beautiful video without any hassle. Here are the 5 best free tools you can use.

1. Apowersoft Online Video Watermark Remover

First on this list is Apowersoft's watermark removal tool. Apowersoft is an online service that provides a lot of online solutions and tools that you can find and use easily.

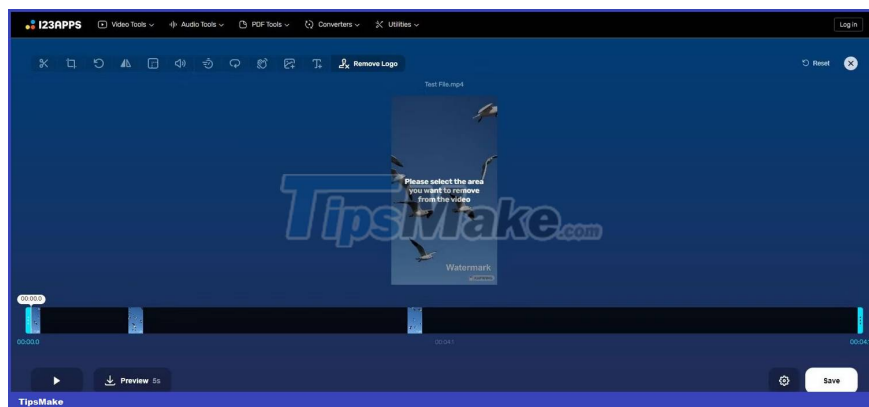

Video watermark removal tool is one such thing. If you have a watermark that needs removing then Apowersoft might be exactly what you are looking for.

Using this tool is very easy. All you have to do is upload your video to the service and you'll be taken to the editor. There are quite a few different video formats supported here, such as MP4, MKV and WEBM among them, but for obscure file types, you may encounter difficulties.

After you run the application, Apowersoft will handle the rest, filling in the gaps based on surrounding data in the video to hide the watermark. Sure, you can use one of the many free apps to trim or split your video, but that will lose valuable data.

The end result is usually quite good. For more complex backgrounds and moving parts, the results can look a bit strange. However, for short clips and small watermarks, Apowersoft does a pretty good job.

2. 123apps online watermark removal tool

Next on this list is the online watermark removal tool from 123apps. If you're looking for something a little more feature-rich that supports watermark removal, this is a great option for that.

123apps is an online service that supports a lot of different tools. If you are looking for an online watermark removal service that can get the job done then 123apps can definitely do the job.

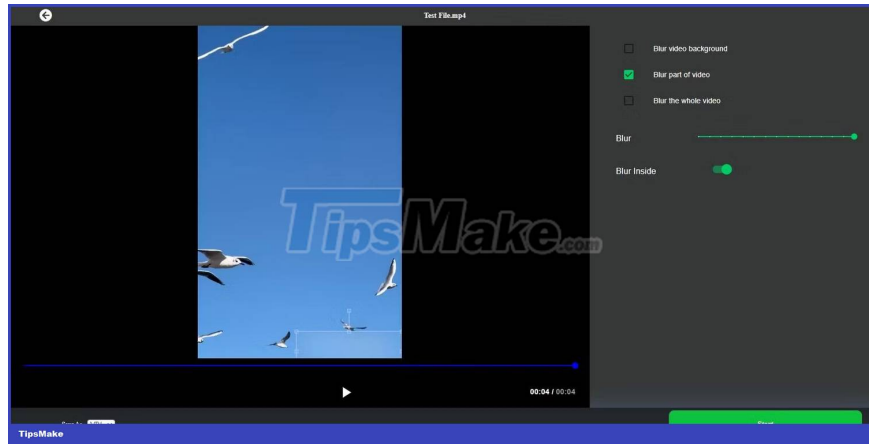

All you have to do is upload your video to the video editor. You will then be prompted to select the area you want to remove from the video. Like some of the other options in this list, this will create a resizable box to place around the watermark you want to remove.

123apps is a great place to remove watermarks and edit videos. For example, if you want to cut a portion of a video while also removing the watermark, you can do so with the free online watermark removal tool from 123apps.

There are many things you can do here. 123apps includes tools that allow you to crop, flip and rotate etc. All the tools here work well together without any problems, so if you want to use them all together Sometimes you won't have any problem doing so.

It sometimes struggles with more complex scenarios, but overall the results are quite reliable.

3. PickFrom Blur Video Online

If you're getting strange or visually unpleasant results from some of the other options on this list, PickFrom's online video processing tool may be the right solution. As you might guess from the name, this free online tool adds opacity to videos instead of trying to remove watermarks.

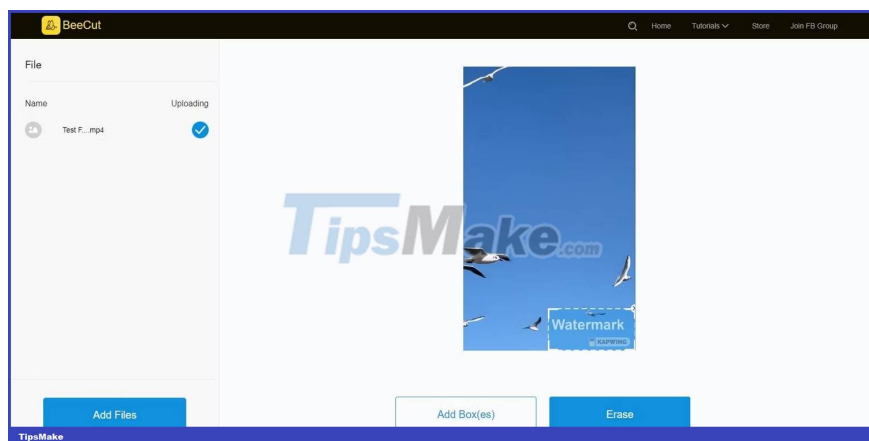

If you have a particularly large or complex watermark that specialized tools may have difficulty removing. When attempting to fill the void created by a watermark, these tools can create confusing visual effects.

Instead, PickFrom allows you to simply blur the watermark. Thanks to this app, it's extremely quick and easy, besides, every operation is intuitive and simple to grasp.

All you have to do is upload your video and you'll be taken to PickFrom's video editor. The editor itself is quite simple. There are 3 options on the side of the video preview where you can choose how you want to blur. To remove a watermark, blurring part of the video is almost certainly what you want, but other options can sometimes be useful as well.

From there, all you need to do is move the blur box to the location of the watermark you want to hide. You can adjust the blur intensity here to whatever you like, but for best results you should probably adjust until the intensity is just high enough to cover the text without disturbing it. Mix too many other things.

4. BeeCut Online Watermark Remover

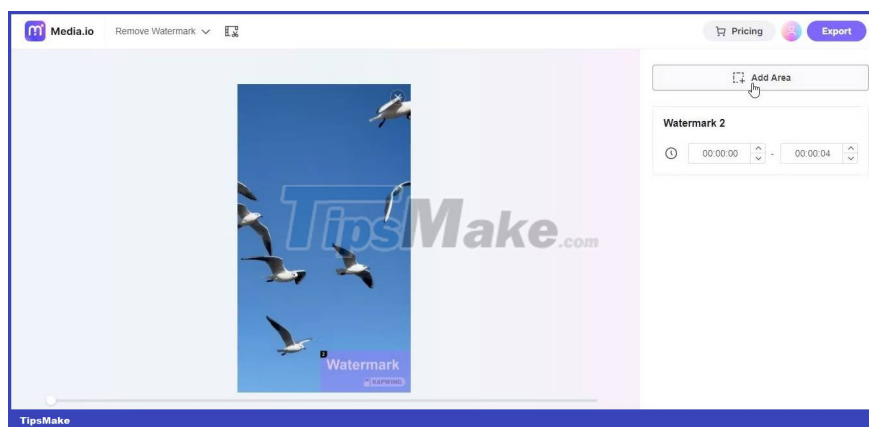

Next, we have the online watermark removal tool from BeeCut. This online tool works not only for videos but also for images.

As you might expect, the process of using this watermark removal tool is quite simple. All you have to do is upload your file directly and everything will be ready to start.

The editor is relatively simple but it gets the job done well. To direct the watermark removal, you will need to add resizable boxes to set the area to be processed by the editing tool, although you can add and remove them quite freely.

The end result is quite good for a free online tool, although as with many other entries on this list, you may find that it delivers different results based on background and watermark complexity .

5. Medio.io online free video editor

Finally, we have the free online video editor from Medio.io. This video editor allows you to do a lot of operations with your online videos, such as converting, compressing, reversing, etc. Naturally, one of these features is removing video watermarks.

Using Medio.io's watermark removal tool is extremely easy to do. You can upload your files through folder navigation or by dragging and dropping, and you'll be ready to go.

Medio.io uses resizable boxes to mark where you want to remove the watermark, and you can add as many boxes to the video as you like. The process is pretty quick and the results aren't bad. Against an unchanging background, you can barely tell there was ever a watermark, although with moving objects the tool starts to have some difficulties.

It's worth noting that although Medio.io is completely free to use, this only happens the first two times you remove the watermark. After that, you will have to upgrade to a premium plan to continue using the service.
