Apple's new MacBook Pro is fueling noisy, lively comments even exaggerated words. Apple boss Phil Schiller called it the "best MacBook Pro" that Apple ever made. Gizmodo tech's Sam Biddle also followed 'it's the most incredible laptop we've seen'.

And on the Slate page, this new laptop model is described as the " best personal computer version". With a host of new features such as a super-compact chassis, delicious internal parts and especially Retina screens that are being loved by many people, the new MacBook Pro is bright enough for many people to dislike Apple. must also move. But this 'best ever' laptop has its weaknesses. And here are 5 things users should consider before buying.

1. Very difficult to fix

The iFixit website, which offers tips to help users troubleshoot problems, has tested the new MacBook Pro with the ability to 'fix' and has marked the new MacBook Pro with the lowest score: point 1 on October 10. point. The experiment found out that Apple's almost monolithic screws, parts, and expensive components were difficult for users to find instead - especially the new Retina screen. "The new MacBook Pro is almost impossible to upgrade," said Kyle Wiens, CEO of iFixit. That first MacBook Pro will not be able to adapt to future improvements in storage and memory technology. 'At this point, this is the least repairable laptop we've ever seen.'

2. Expensive

The price of $ 2,199 for the lowest MacBook Pro is actually higher than the ability of many middle-class people to buy. And for most people, it's a ' significant ' investment . Apple's designer Jony Ive was very patient and creative to come up with a truly 'artistic' product . However, not many " normal" people buy new MacBook Pro, because this beautiful new model "moves to the heart, not the user ' head .

3. Websites and applications are not yet customized for Retina screens

Almost all current laptops have high-resolution screens. And the more HD screens appear on the market, the more websites and applications will be customized to suit this type of monitor. But now, the new MacBook Pro's Retina display is not in this category. So, if you decide to buy a new MacBook Pro, wait until 'the whole world changes.'

4. Laptop can become 'antique'

Some sites say Apple is suffering from 'schizophrenia' . On the one hand, the company is deliberately killing the computer with the iPad model, but the company is also trying to " extend the life of computers with notebook models like Air ". In addition, the MacBook line seems to have converged on many of the iPad's features. In about 3 years, what is the difference between an iPad of $ 499 and a $ 999 MacBook?

5. Cheaper Retina screen may be coming soon

Currently, the new MacBook is the ' best ' laptop Apple produces. But it seems that other companies are only temporarily settling down the path to a near future, when all laptops are paper-thin and light as feathers. Perhaps, it should not be surprising that the Retina screen will appear on less expensive laptops - like the MacBook Air, for example, costs $ 999.
