

5 reasons to buy an external keyboard for laptops

Laptop keyboards can cause a lot of discomfort for some people, such as keys that are too hard, do not work properly or even completely stop working.

Do you have sweaty palms when working on a laptop? Laptop keyboards can cause a lot of discomfort for some people, such as keys that are too hard, do not work properly or even completely stop working. Also, if you're familiar with desktop computers, you may find the keyboard on your laptop too small and limited. It can make you make many mistakes, as well as slower typing.

Today, many people choose to buy an external keyboard for their laptop. In this article, you will learn the reasons why you need an extra keyboard for your laptop.

1. Bear less heat under the fingertips

When the laptop is hot, it can be quite frustrating when working. Even with a cooling device, at the time you do a resource-intensive task, the touchpad will become very hot. To work comfortably - especially in the summer - an external keyboard is a good solution and is probably the only one.

2. Further distance from the screen

Experts believe that the distance between the computer user and the device's screen should be at least 40cm. To ensure this recommended distance, consider buying an external keyboard.

Further distances from the screen

3. Set the screen flexibly

People who use PCs for a long time tend to put themselves in strange positions and often have a variety of funny poses. That is not good for the spine. You should sit in the correct posture all the time. Keep your laptop above your fingertips to create a better angle between the screen and your eyes. There are many different laptop racks that you can consider.

In addition, having an external keyboard and mouse can help with presentations, when a projector is not available. You just need to put your laptop on the table for people to view the presentation, and use the external keyboard to manipulate.

4. Reduce the risk of carpal tunnel syndrome

The worst enemy of people who have to type a lot of keyboards is Carpal tunnel syndrome or CTS for short. There are many different ways to avoid this disease, but being careful when typing is the most important thing to remember. For people who are suffering from wrist and finger pain, an external keyboard can relieve pain. You can easily locate an external keyboard, while laptops are often less flexible.

5. More hygiene

Cleaning external accessories is easier than cleaning a laptop

Did you know that the toilet is cleaner than your laptop? In fact, your laptop is 5 times more likely to be dirty than a typical toilet. Therefore, cleaning the external accessories, such as the keyboard, is easier than cleaning the laptop. And if you're concerned about germs, you can easily throw an old keyboard away and buy a new one.

As you can see, you will not only get the health benefits of buying an external keyboard, but also be able to work more efficiently. So don't waste any more time and start looking for a perfect keyboard.

You finished reading the article "5 reasons to buy an external keyboard for laptops" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
