There are many ways you might unintentionally leave a watermark on your video. For example, you might be using a free online video editing service , and that service might add a watermark to your work.

Fortunately, removing them is quite easy. All you need to do is use the right online tools and you'll have a beautiful video without any hassle. Below are 5 of the best free tools you can use.

1. Dewatermark.ai – AI Smart Video Watermark Removal

Dewatermark.ai is an online tool that uses AI technology to automatically identify and remove watermarks from videos. If you're looking for a solution that doesn't require software installation or complicated procedures, Dewatermark might be exactly what you need.

The biggest difference between Dewatermark and other tools on this list is its fully automated processing capability thanks to AI. While most tools require you to manually draw boxes or select the areas to be removed, Dewatermark automatically detects and processes watermarks with virtually no intervention from you.

Using this tool is quite simple. All you have to do is go to dewatermark.ai, select the video watermark removal tool, and then upload your video. After uploading, you can choose to preview to check the quality of the result before deciding to purchase credits. If you are satisfied with what you see, simply select " Get Full HD Video " to download the complete version.

This tool works best with simple, static logo watermarks placed in the corner of the video. If your watermark moves frame by frame or has a complex design, Dewatermark may struggle. Another limitation is the video length limit of only 1 minute 30 seconds, so longer clips will not be processed.

In terms of speed, you need to be a little patient because the processing can take several minutes depending on the complexity of the video.

The final result is quite good with simple watermark cases. On a static or low-movement background, you can get a clean video without leaving any obvious traces. However, with scenes that have a lot of movement or complex details, the background of the video rotating around the watermark container will be slightly affected.

It's worth noting that Dewatermark is still in its early stages of development, so the current limitations are understandable. If your video meets the criteria – short, simple watermark, uncomplicated background – then this is a convenient option to experiment with without investing time in learning professional software.

2. Apowersoft Online Video Watermark Remover

First on this list is Apowersoft's watermark removal tool. Apowersoft is an online service that offers many online solutions and tools that you can easily find and use.

A video watermark removal tool is one such tool. If you have a watermark that needs removing, Apowersoft might be exactly what you're looking for.

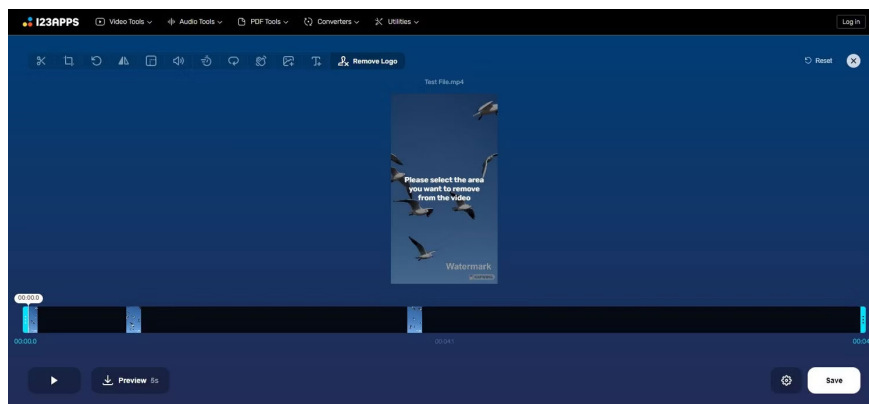

Using this tool is very easy. All you have to do is upload your video to the service and you will be taken to the editor. Quite a few different video formats are supported here, such as MP4 , MKV, and WEBM , but for lesser-known file types, you might encounter difficulties.

After you run the application, Apowersoft will handle the rest, filling in the gaps based on surrounding data in the video to mask the watermark. Sure, you could use one of the many free applications to trim or split your video, but that would result in the loss of valuable data.

The final result is usually quite good. For more complex backgrounds and moving parts, the result might look a little strange. However, for short clips and small watermarks, Apowersoft does a pretty good job.

3. Online watermark removal tool 123apps

Next on this list is the online watermark remover tool from 123apps. If you're looking for something a bit more feature-rich that supports watermark removal, this is a great option to do just that.

123apps is an online service that supports many different tools. If you are looking for an online watermark removal service that can get the job done, 123apps can certainly do it.

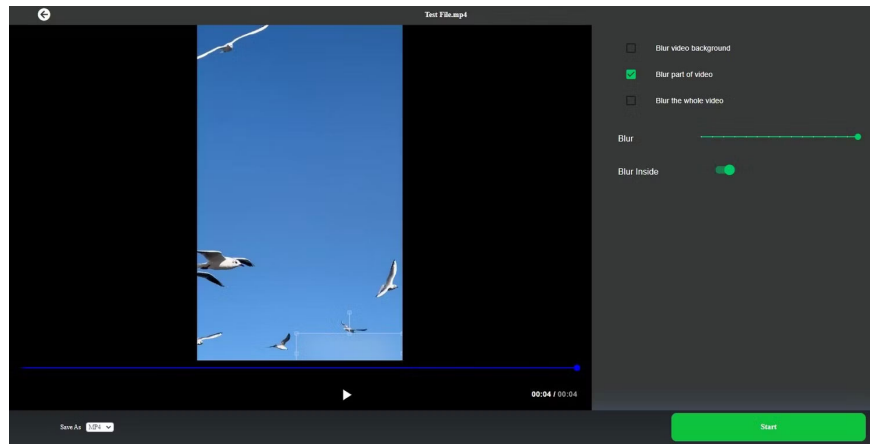

All you have to do is upload your video to the video editor. Then, you'll be prompted to select the area you want to remove from the video. Like some of the other options on this list, this will create a resizable box to place around the watermark you want to remove.

123apps is a great place to remove watermarks and edit videos. For example, if you want to trim a section of a video while simultaneously removing the watermark, you can do so thanks to 123apps' free online watermark removal tool.

There are many things you can do here. 123apps includes tools that allow you to crop, flip, rotate, etc. All the tools here work well together without any problems, so if you want to use them all at once, you won't have any trouble doing so.

It sometimes struggles with more complex scenarios, but overall the results are quite reliable.

4. Pick From Blur Video Online

If you're getting strange or visually unpleasant results from some of the other options on this list, PickFrom's online video editing tool might be the right solution. As you might guess from the name, this free online tool works by adding blur to videos instead of trying to remove watermarks.

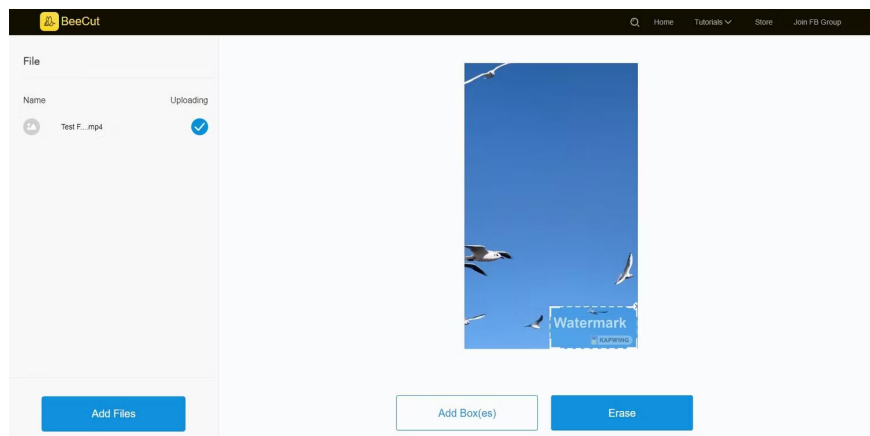

If you have a particularly large or complex watermark, specialized tools may struggle to remove it. Attempting to fill in the gaps created by the watermark can produce confusing visual effects.

Instead, PickFrom allows you to easily blur watermarks. Thanks to this application, this is extremely quick and easy, and all operations are intuitive and simple to understand.

All you have to do is upload your video and you'll be taken to PickFrom's video editor. The editor itself is quite simple. There are three options next to the video preview where you can choose how you want to blur. To remove the watermark, blurring a portion of the video is almost certainly what you want, but the other options can sometimes be helpful as well.

From there, all you need to do is move the blur box to the location of the watermark you want to cover. You can adjust the blur intensity here to whatever you like; however, for best results, you should probably adjust it until the intensity is high enough to cover the text without disrupting too much other elements.

5. BeeCut Online Watermark Remover

Next, we have an online watermark removal tool from BeeCut. This online tool works not only for videos but also for images.

As you might expect, the process of using this watermark removal tool is quite simple. All you have to do is upload your file directly and everything will be ready to go.

The editor is relatively simple but it gets the job done well. To direct the removal of the watermark, you'll need to add resizable boxes to set the area to be processed by the editing tool, although you can add and remove them quite freely.

The final result is quite good for a free online tool, although, as with many others on this list, you may find that it yields different results based on the complexity of the background and watermark.

6. Medio.io, a free online video editor.

Finally, we have a free online video editor from Medio.io. This video editor allows you to perform many operations on your online videos, such as converting, compressing, reversing, etc. Naturally, one of these features is removing video watermarks.

Using Medio.io's watermark removal tool is incredibly easy. You can upload your files via folder navigation or by dragging and dropping, and then you're ready to go.

Medio.io uses resizable boxes to mark the location where you want to remove the watermark, and you can add as many boxes to the video as you like. The process is fairly quick, and the results aren't bad. On a static background, you can barely tell there was ever a watermark, although with moving objects, the tool starts to struggle a bit.

It's worth noting that although Medio.io is completely free to use, this only happens the first two times you remove the watermark. After that, you'll need to upgrade to a premium plan to continue using the service.
