Sometimes, the maximum volume your speakers provide just doesn't seem to be enough. Or perhaps your headphones have a problem, making the sound barely audible.

If you are stuck in a situation like that, you will need a volume booster software.

Applications enhance, amplify the sound beyond the maximum limit through different algorithms. There are many options, so TipsMake.com.com has dug through to provide you with some of the best volume boosters available.

1. Equalizer APO

Equalizer APO is one of the best open source volume booster software available for Windows users. The application is quite heavy on the technical aspect.

The app offers unlimited filters, multi-channel compatibility, low latency and CPU usage - making it the perfect choice for all your acceleration needs. When you launch it for the first time, the application will ask you to configure the devices for which you want to increase the volume for speakers, headphones, etc.

Finally, from there, you can use features like Preamplification, Graphic EQ, etc. to get the most out of the application.

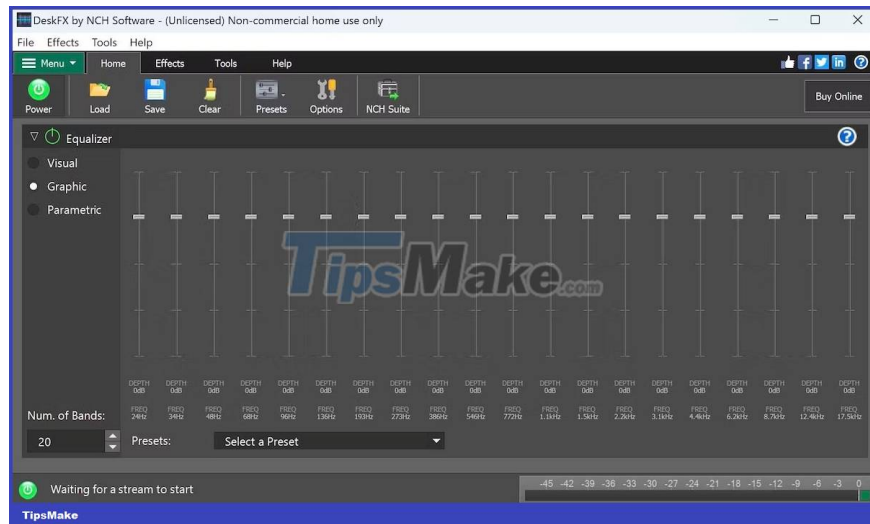

2. FxSound

TipsMake.com has mentioned FXSound before in our guide to the best equalizer software on Windows. But apart from great equalization, the app also offers other features like increasing your volume and sound quality.

FXSound does this by improving sound quality through 32-bit floating processing and 16-bit remixing. Finally, as the quality has improved, you can now enhance the sound as much as you can through Dynamic Boost and increase the volume without sacrificing quality. You can also improve the Parametric EQ to boost bass.

Best of all, the app is free, so you can try it out for as long as you like.

3. DeskFX Audio Enhancer

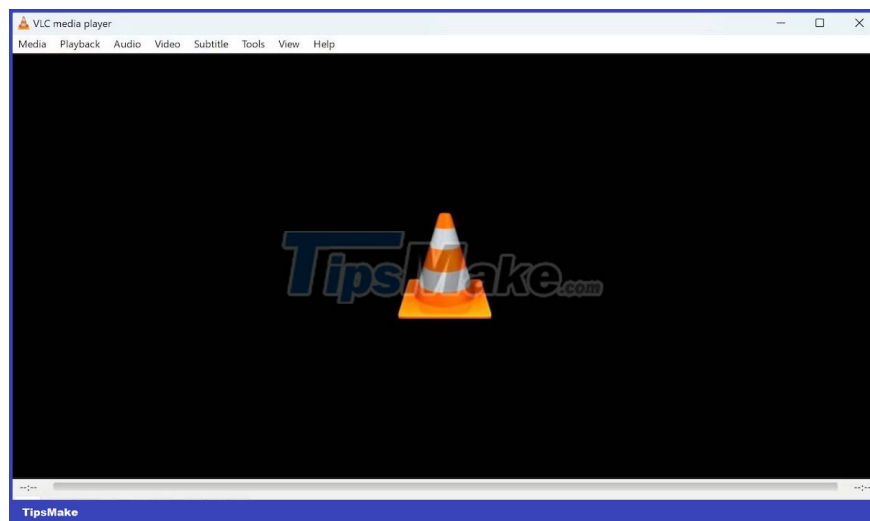

DeskFX Audio Enhancer offers a variety of audio settings such as equalizer, gain, reverb, chorus, etc., all of which work to help you increase the quality and volume of your audio.

This helps you increase the volume without losing sound quality. DeskFX Audio Enhancer also works with almost all popular apps like Spotify, Apple Music, YouTube, movies, games, etc. - making it a good choice if you want an app that you can use in many places.

The app is available for free, but to access all the features you will need to purchase the full version of the product.

4. VLC Media Player

VLC Media Player has a built-in tool that can boost your device's audio up to 125% without losing sound quality. However, since VLC is a media player that plays your audio and video files, it's safe to say that the app's ability to increase the volume is limited to your video and audio files only.

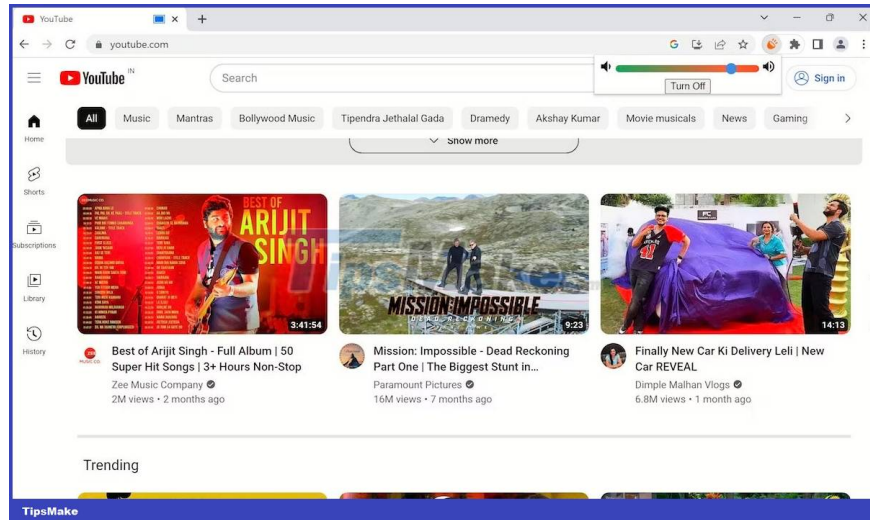

To amplify the sound on VLC, simply slide the volume slider to maximum and the app will do the rest. By default, the limit is set to 125%. You can increase this limit up to 300% with some adjustments in the settings, but this may affect the sound quality.

5. Viper4Windows

Viper4Windows is a fully functional audio management application that uses many independent audio processing algorithms. This allows the application to adjust the system volume on various channels - video chat, music player, video, radio, etc.

The application is free and you can use it on all versions of Windows from Vista onwards.
