

7 feng shui tips to help you advance as fast as 'kite meets the wind'

Not only knowledge - experience - skills, feng shui is also one of the top factors that many office workers care about. Because, according to the concept of many people, the direction of the desk, the direction of the room, the direction of the company all have a great impact on their peace of mind and their boss's attention.

Not only knowledge - experience - skills, feng shui is also one of the top factors that many office workers care about. Because, according to the concept of many people, the direction of the desk, the direction of the room, the direction of the company all have a great impact on them having "peace of mind" and being "noticed" by the boss.

Not to mention other profound issues, look at a desk that is located in a cool, spacious, ventilated window and your mind is enough to make us feel comfortable and more interested in working every morning to the office. On the other hand, if the table is in a position that lacks light and especially faces the wall, no one has the motivation to sit there for long.

Here are 7 feng shui tips to help you choose the desk position that suits your ideas and promote as fast as you want.

1. Select the desk that is located in the position where you can see the door

Quite simply, when you see the entrance, you will be proactive with anyone suddenly entering the room instead of being passive. If now, your position does not meet this, you can put a small mirror on the table to see the mirror image of the door.

2. Balance work position

According to feng shui conception, balance is a very important factor. The sense of balance will make us feel comfortable, relieve pressure and stress, and also help attract positive external energy sources. Therefore, you should choose a workbench with a balance of tools and decorations, such as hard - soft, dynamic - static and harmonious colors.

3. Tidy

The neat work table will help the surrounding air flow be circulated and avoid creating stress. Moreover, if entering a room too cluttered, it would be easy to lose sympathy.

4. Comfortable

If you are an engineer, designer, accountant, translator or generally a person who regularly works with a computer, you should choose a desk with a comfortable chair, mouse and computer located in your position. Easy to use, easy to control. Because the feeling of comfort will help you easily focus and avoid fatigue better.

5. Location when entering the meeting room

When entering the meeting room, you should also choose the appropriate location to improve your alertness and comprehension. The position to sit west - north, east - south is considered favorable for leadership and decision - making activities. Meanwhile, sitting in the opposite position will have a positive impact on the communication and presentation process.

In case you cannot locate the direction of the meeting room, try to select the seat deep in the room and make sure you can see the door.

6. Place the bonsai at the desk

Many studies show that green trees contribute to stimulate creativity and increase productivity of people. Therefore, you can plant some types of trees at the desk like betel nut, narcissus or tiger blade.

7. Some other notes

1. Do not place a desk under the rafters (if the office has rafters to raise the ceiling). Because, it will create a sense of pressure for the person sitting below.
2. The desk is not located next to the corridor window. Because the window is where the air comes in and out while the corridor is where many people pass and often has more bad air.
3. Do not use a desk that is in the same direction as the flowing water of ditches or rivers, but look for countertops with the opposite direction.
4. The sides of the desk should not be facing straight or leaning on the toilet door.
5. The direction of the desk should not point directly to the main door. The seat is not too big nor too small.

You finished reading the article "7 feng shui tips to help you advance as fast as 'kite meets the wind'" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.