

7 reasons to quit most convincingly

There are so many reasons for resignation but which one to agree on and retain your image?

The reason for resignation is the hardest when writing a letter of resignation. There are many reasons but choosing which one to agree with and still retain your image, is also the answer when you go to a new job interview. If you do not want to have a headache, you can refer to 7 common reasons for resignation.

1. Personal reasons

For personal reasons, I couldn't be at the company for many months. This makes me not to complete the assigned work, affecting the common interests of the company.

2. Going to higher school

In the future, I will take a marketing course (or graphic design, English, programming .) to improve and further improve my skills. With the upcoming class schedule, my time cannot meet my current job.

3. Change career goals

After thinking and orienting myself, I found that my current job did not suit my ability. So I decided to change my career goals so that I could show my full ability and achieve what I want.

You can specify the copy why it is not suitable for the current job and want to have a job like.

Moving house

My family moved to the location . making the process of moving from home to the company difficult.

Planning to get married, have children in the near future

In the future, I will get married / have children. So I want to quit my job to have more time to take care of my family / children.

Find a better job

I have found a new job, consistent with my ability, have a chance of advancing higher.

Want business

Soon I will open a separate business store. So I quit my job to focus on my store.

Reasons for quitting should not be used

The reason for actually leaving a lot of people is often low wages, disagreements with your boss or colleagues, working inadequate skills . However, you should not include these reasons in your job application to avoid extending the time. quit work. Choose a good reason to easily get your boss's approval.
