

7 signs to recognize when your computer is infected with spyware

With the dangerous threats that Spyware gives you now, you will wonder how to identify Spyware in your system, here are some of the most common signs when your system is infected. You are infected with Spyware.

With the dangerous threats that Spyware gives you now, you will wonder how to identify Spyware in your system, here are some of the most common signs when your system is infected. You are infected with Spyware.

1. The phenomenon you can easily see most is that your entire system is significantly slowed down especially when surfing the web because there are so many Spyware running permanently.
2. If your browser suddenly pops up an unwanted website, a pop-up window appears even if you don't browse the web or the web browser appears with new toolbar. If you don't know, your computer will definitely be infected with spyware.

3. The homepage of the web browser is changed abnormally and most of them are pages with unhealthy content, which makes you even more annoyed that you cannot change these home pages again.
4. You are constantly receiving unusual notifications, which is worse than being able to stop the network connection process or automatically turn off the web browser.

5. When you use a favorite search site like google, the browser arbitrarily offers a different search site where most of these search sites have 'useless' content.
6. When using email services, you often get spam, which means getting too much to allow advertising emails or even malicious emails.
7. You may notice strange links that are arbitrarily added to Favorites list or in the Start menu.

Nguyen Luan

You finished reading the article "7 signs to recognize when your computer is infected with spyware" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.