YouTube is the Internet's video store, but it has had a tough year 2017. A series of large companies have stopped working with YouTube, not posting ads on YouTube anymore because of concerns that their ads will appear with objectionable videos. This means that YouTube creators everywhere lose money.

1. 7 ways to download videos on Youtube quickly and simply

YouTube Kids application has been flooded with scary, fake videos like children's cartoons. This begins when the video has characters from Peppa Pig, Frozen and other popular TV shows that turn into violent, inappropriate and scary scenes.

1. Ways to protect children from "malicious" Youtube videos

And many YouTube stars have been condemned in 2017 for various silly actions. In fact, 2018 also began to make similar mistakes. A famous YouTuber Logan Paul videotaped the famous Japanese Sea of ??Trees suicide forest and recorded a suicide man.

These problems plus transparency on YouTube and content creators do not inform subscribers about new videos, YouTube users have encountered a variety of difficult issues. Luckily, you as a normal everyday user can make YouTube better in 2018.

1. Stop me from the creators of the content you don't like

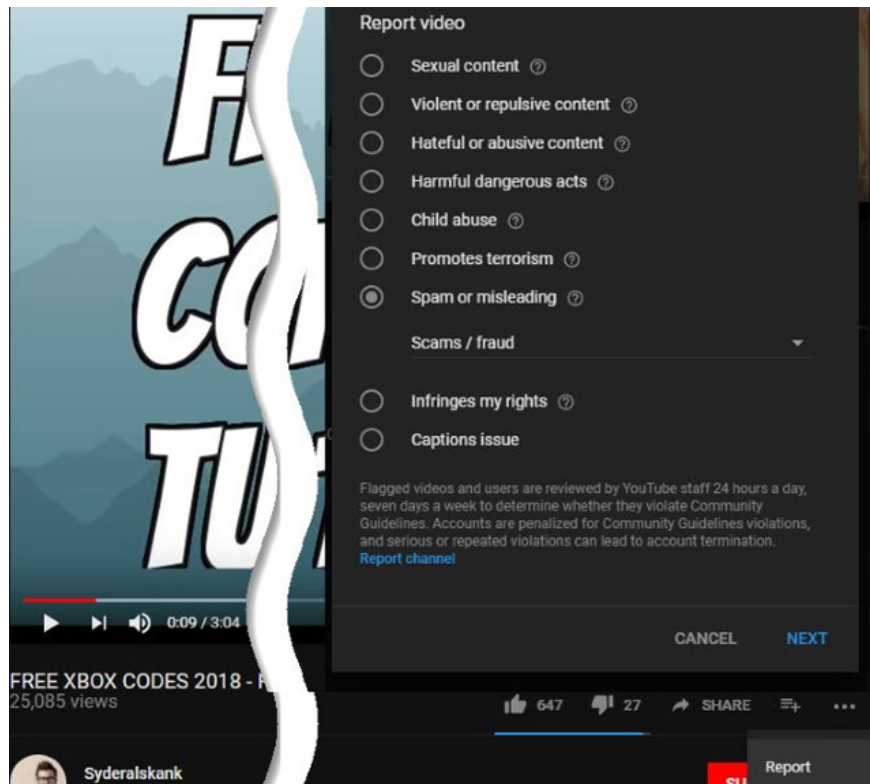

This is a very important point because views are everything on YouTube. If you hate a channel, the worst thing you can do is share it with a comment like "this video is terrible." But your actions not only increase the number of views for the video, but also make those who view it through sharing give the video creator more money through advertising.

So if you hate a channel, don't watch their video, completely ignore it and when you do that you can reduce their presence on YouTube.

2. Report the video you think has content that violates the rule

YouTube has general policies that guide content included in videos. Videos containing nudity, violence, danger for children or scams violate the rules and you as a Youtube viewer, report when you see videos with such content.

On any video, you can click the three dots Menu button and select Report . Then select the content that it violates and YouTube staff will review the flag to determine whether it is legal or not.

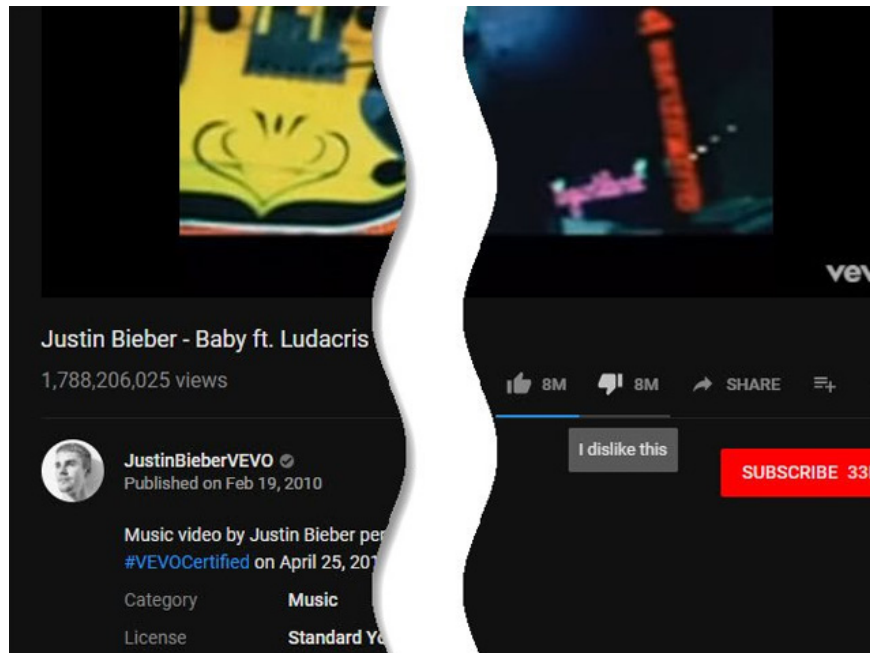

It is important to note that the report is not for videos you disagree with, do not like. You should not report videos just because you don't like creators' channels or opinions. Only use reports for videos that really violate YouTube's rules.

1. How to report YouTube videos with inappropriate content

3. Always click the Like and Dislike button on each video you watch

YouTube uses a simple voting system like Like / Dislike (which shows the thumb up and down). If you like the video, take a moment to give it a Like. When not like one, give it Dislike. Unlike reporting, clicking these buttons is an appropriate way to express your opinion.

If the video makes you laugh, answer your questions or raise your interest, give it a Likes. Unable to follow the instructions, think the creator's argument is not rich, or even video content is not related to the title, click the Dislike button.

Videos with multiple favorite votes will most likely be displayed in the list of suggestions and appear earlier in the search. In addition, if clicking on a video and seeing it as dislike, you might know that others are warning you that this video is not worth watching.

4. Avoid the main stream, find the original YouTube channel

Over the past few years, YouTube has released Rewind video in December. Its purpose is to summarize the highlights of the page in a year. Who started the 2017 video? Of course, it's YouTuber's favorite friend, Stephen Colbert.

Stephen Colbert is a TV presenter and not YouTube making his success. He does not participate in videos that have the biggest moments of YouTube during the year. This is just one of the problems with this video in particular and on YouTube in general. Many YouTube fans criticized it for "polishing" content creators that made YouTube great. This video also ignores YouTube issues in 2017.

Therefore, we recommend avoiding "big" channels that don't start on YouTube. VEVO music video channel does not make YouTube great, ignore them and find channels that are only available on YouTube.

5. Share videos and track creators on social media

Remember the first thing? You should ignore the videos you don't like. Do the opposite of the videos you like, give it a like. Whenever you find a great new channel, spread their content with your friends and on a social platform to let people know and help content creators especially newcomers.

In addition, you should track your favorite YouTube users on social sites if they use them to receive notifications and view their activity on YouTube because YouTube has a problem with notifying subscribers of new videos. before. Watching your favorite channel on Twitter means you have a better chance of seeing new videos right away.

7. Support creators through direct method

If you don't want to use YouTube Red, then you have another way to support your favorite channels. Getting links and sharing will help creators of content a lot. But if you really want to support your favorite channels, give them a few dollars. Many YouTube users have a Patreon account, a service that allows small donations each month. In return, this YouTuber will provide users with exclusive content, early access to videos and other similar privileges.
