2. Thomas & Friends Minis

Thomas & Friends Minis allows children to design and build their own Thomas the Tank Engine train sets. This great train simulation game places a virtual toy train in the room, then allows you and your children to build the virtual train tracks in any way they see fit.

You can create a simple track or try performing roller coasters with dizzying stunts. There is no limit to what your child can do.

This app offers a lot of toy trains, like Thomas, James, Hiro, etc. You can take your character through many different worlds in the game. While it's free to start, you'll need to fully unlock the game through in-app purchases in order to see everything.

However, this relatively small cost is well worth a game that can help children enjoy the whole day like Thomas & Friends Minis. This will also save you a fair amount of money, since you no longer have to visit the toy store often.

3. Angry Birds AR: Isle of Pigs

In Rovio's Angry Birds AR: Isle of Pigs, the classic Angry Birds game turns into an epic AR adventure, perfect for entertaining kids who are bored because there's nothing to play. Just like in the 2009 classic, you have to launch birds into an army of evil pigs in order to get back the stolen eggs.

This time, however, there's a change: 'The battlefield' is right in the living room, park or wherever you see fit, thanks to AR.

Angry Birds AR is perfect for kids, thanks to cute heroic birds such as Red, Bomb, Chuck, etc. This game also brings the fun Angry Birds gameplay, requiring skills and strategies. And the super cool AR elements of the game are sure to surprise the kids.
