Everyone needs an effective way to manage appointments, deadlines and birthdays and anniversaries. You can't remember all these things, but luckily there are mobile apps that help you keep them. So, let's see some free calendar apps for Android available in the following Google Play Store.

1. Google Calendar

Opening this list of free calendar apps is obviously Google Calendar, which comes pre-installed on most Android devices and is available in Play Store for everyone. If you use other Google productivity services (such as Gmail or Keep), make sure it's installed on your device.

Google has refurbished the app in 2014 to match Android's new Material Design design. Web applications also edit designs a lot in 2017, so both versions have many rich features.

Simply swipe to switch calendar from month to month, and you can set up auto-pull events (such as hotel reservations, flights and event tickets) from your inbox and add on schedule.

Finally, Google has also added a schedule view, showing you a continuous list of upcoming events instead of displaying by day or week.

This calendar application is simple, but the accessibility makes it great. It does not connect to Google Calendar or any other name-based cloud-based calendar service.

Instead, all application data is stored locally on your device and the application's code is open source. It will only require two access rights: Contacts (to enter the date of birth and anniversary) and Storage (to export ICS files).

We live in an era where Google knows everything about you, this level of privacy will definitely attract users.
