

8 Best Viral Video Sites to Track What's Trending

Viral videos aren't just for laughs. They shape our social culture and often spill over into news and real life.

Viral videos aren't just for laughs. They shape our social culture and often spill over into news and real life. But to see the best viral videos from across the web, you'll need to look all over the web, from YouTube to TikTok and more.

8. YouTube Charts

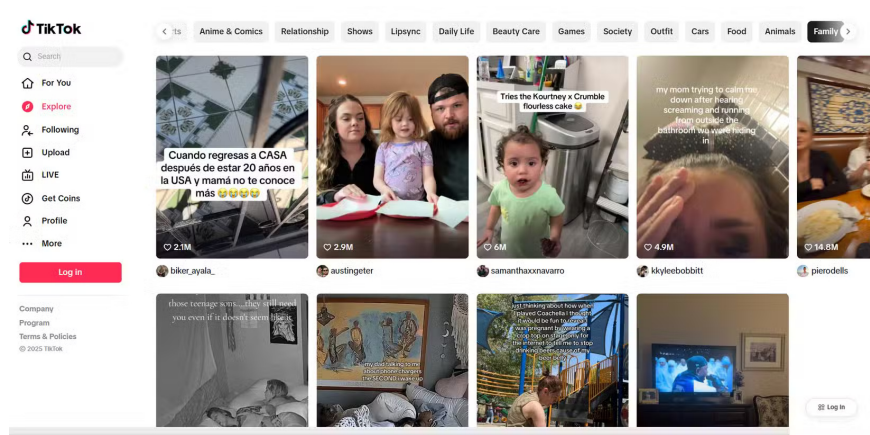

To find out what's really going viral, start here. YouTube is, of course, the world's largest video platform. But the YouTube Charts page is the pulse of what's going viral in the music world. This section highlights the most viewed music videos and the artists behind them.

The charts are updated in real time, so you'll always find the latest record-breaking music videos charting here. Select your country if you'd like music from other countries.

Many people enjoy browsing through daily top songs in short videos. This is a great way to discover new songs on YouTube and expand your interests.

7. TikTok

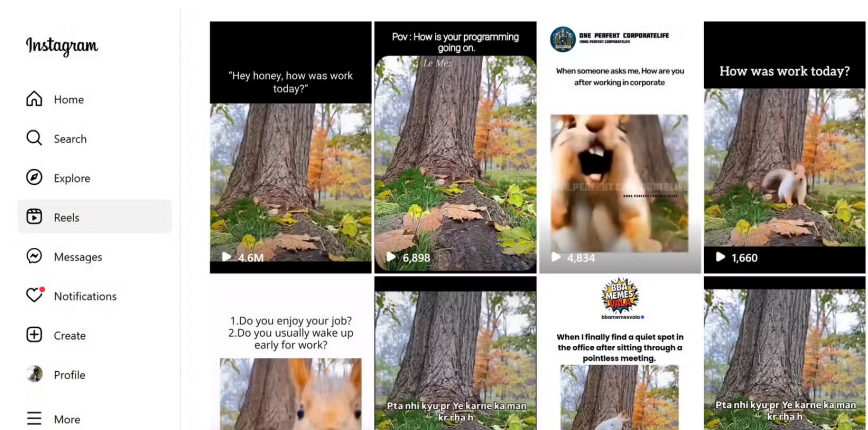

TikTok has helped redefine social culture. TikTok's short, addictive clips are perfect for small mobile screens. The For You page instantly provides what's trending right now.

TikTok's diverse content includes everything from creator-made dance challenges to comedy skits. You'll also find plenty of educational and creative short videos.

Trends change quickly; videos often spill over into pop culture and other platforms. But if you want to catch the hottest internet moments as they happen, TikTok is the place to be, despite the controversy it's been through.

6. Instagram Reels

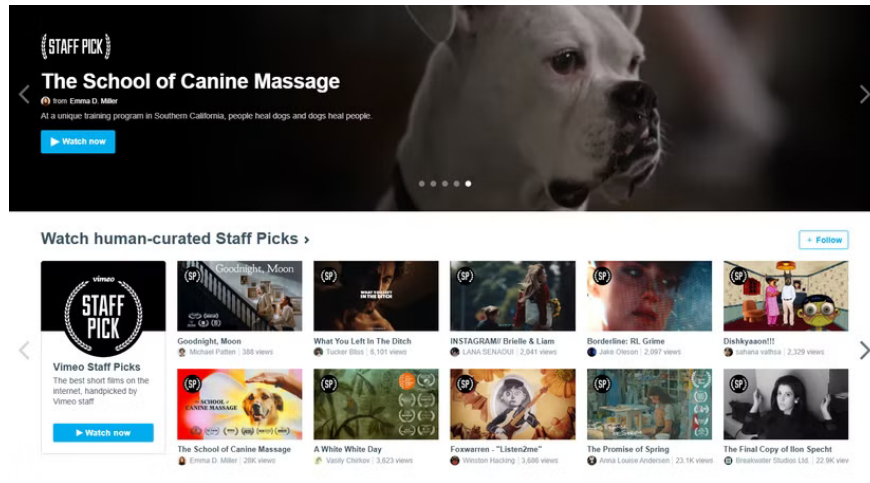

Instagram may be the world's most popular photo-sharing app. But Reels is where the viral content comes in with a steady stream of short videos. Instagram's algorithm pushes the most engaging Reels to your Explore page, so you'll always see what's trending.

Reels range in length from 15 seconds to 3 minutes. Humor, music, and fast storytelling dominate here, making them a top choice for viral content that's easy to watch and share. Use trending hashtags to find content you'll love.

Many people like to use Instagram Reels to find trending songs and music. Sometimes the stories inside the Reels are great too.

5. Vimeo

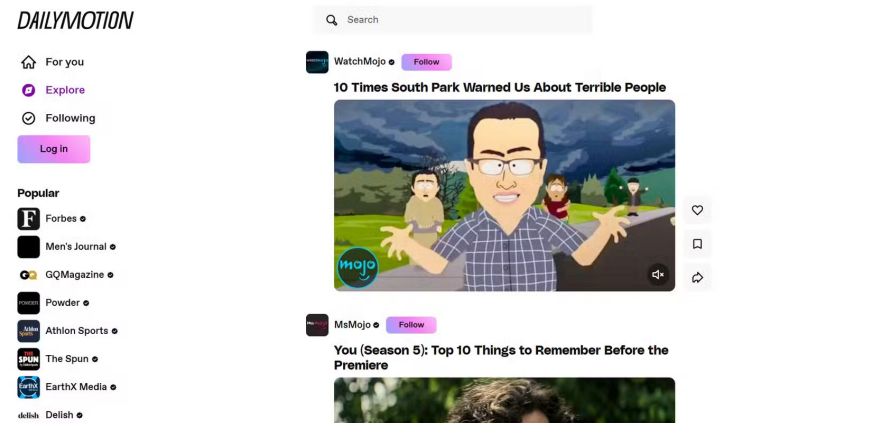

If YouTube is the bustling hub of online videos, Vimeo is the quiet art gallery. It is curated and focuses on quality over quantity. The focus on originality and artistry makes Vimeo one of the best alternatives to YouTube.

Two notable features that set Vimeo apart: Superior video and audio quality, support for resolutions up to 8K and several lossless audio formats. A customizable, ad-free player is a boon for both viewers and creators.

Vimeo's human-curated Staff Picks channel is a hidden gem for viral hits. To discover more viral content on Vimeo, visit the Watch page or explore the curated channels and categories that interest you.

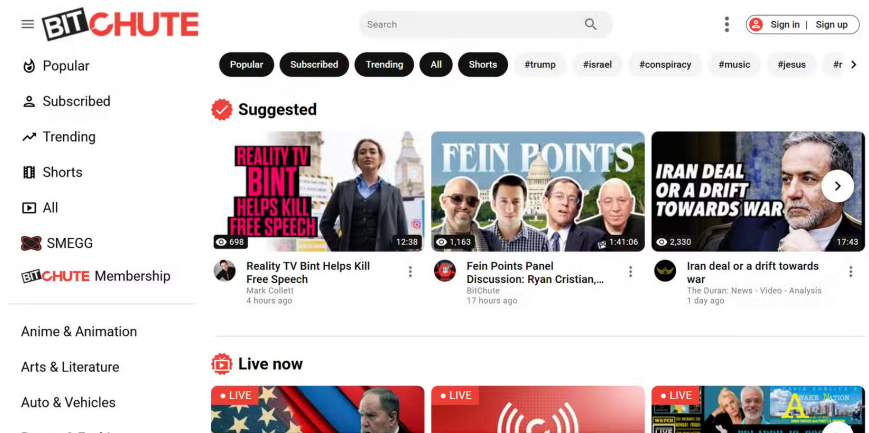

4. Dailymotion

Dailymotion is a global video sharing site that has been around for almost as long as YouTube. The French video sharing platform is particularly popular in Europe and offers a mix of short viral videos, trending news and entertainment. The homepage highlights what's trending and you'll find everything from hilarious fails to music videos and breaking news.

Dailymotion's less crowded space makes it a great alternative for discovering viral content that might not appear elsewhere.

3. BitChute

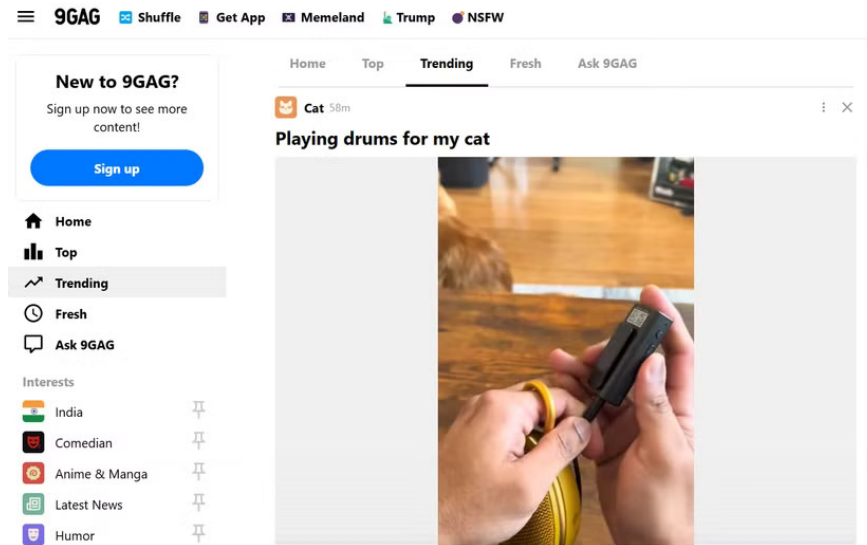

BitChute is an alternative video platform that promotes freedom of speech and minimal censorship. Viral videos here often come from a small but highly engaged community.

While not mainstream, BitChute's trending section features videos that fall into the niche. Some are controversial, some are quirky, but most are raw and unedited. If you're curious about what's going viral outside of mainstream video sharing sites, BitChute is worth a look.

According to a 2023 Pew Research study, one-third of BitChute creators have been banned or demonetized on other social media sites.

2. 9Gag

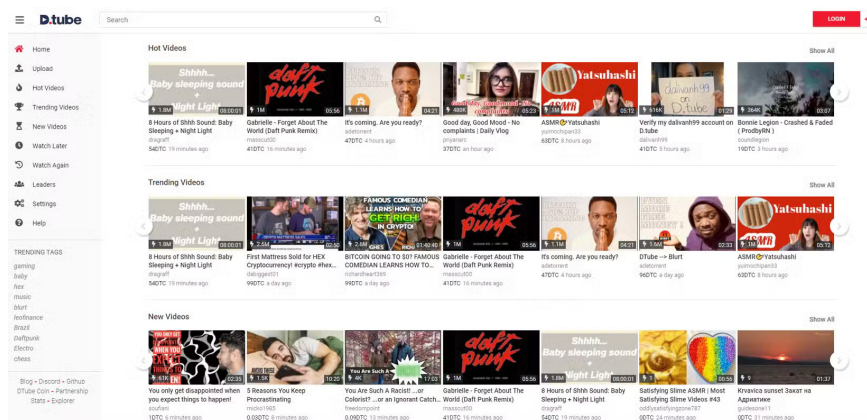

Since 2008, 9Gag has become one of the most popular sites on the internet for memes, GIFs, and short viral videos. The community votes for the funniest or most shocking clips, so the most eye-catching ones quickly rise to the top.

9Gag's Top and Trending sections are filled with videos and memes that go viral on other social media sites within hours.

9Gag also includes a lot of NSFW content, so it's not suitable for all ages. Common Sense Media says there are no privacy or moderation settings explicitly listed on the site.

1. DTube

DTube is a decentralized video platform that rewards creators with cryptocurrency and does not rely on advertising. The site's trending section features videos that are getting the most attention, often from tech enthusiasts looking for alternatives to mainstream sites.

The site's community-driven approach means that viral videos are promoted based on user votes, not algorithms. DTube could be a refreshing option if you want to support independent creators and see what's trending on a blockchain-based social networking site.

To keep up with what's trending:

1. Check out the trending or viral sections daily - timing is everything.
2. Discover hidden gems outside the mainstream.
3. Share your favorites to help them go viral.

Whether you want a good laugh, the latest meme, or a glimpse of what the world is watching, these sites offer more than you could consume in a lifetime.

You finished reading the article "8 Best Viral Video Sites to Track What's Trending" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.