

Acer netbooks running Chrome OS will be released in mid-2010

Acer will sell netbook running Chrome operating system sooner than expected to boost the business situation and avoid other competitors.

Acer will sell netbook running Chrome operating system sooner than expected to boost the business situation and avoid other competitors .

Acer put a lot of hope into the netbook running Chrome OS. Photo: Mobilecomputermag .

According to previous information from Digitimes, Acer will bring the netbook running Google's Chrome operating system in the second half of this year. But recently, Digitimes said that Acer will release their netbook earlier, in mid-year, with the intention of promoting its business situation, as well as avoiding competition from Asus, HP and Samsung.

Digitimes also said Acer expects to sell 1 million "Chromebooks" in the first year. With the use of Chrome OS with Web-based applications, this netbook will be able to boot as well as operate safely, faster than Windows.

You finished reading the article "Acer netbooks running Chrome OS will be released in mid-2010" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
