

Read text files and PDF

Files (files) PDF and regular text are the formats that Chrome also handled very well. Of course, with text files you can open them quickly with Notepad, but with PDF files is another story. Adobe Reader - a specialized application to open this type of file - is considered to be quite heavy, so opening a PDF file with Chrome can be much more convenient.

To read text / PDF files with Chrome, you do the same as music / video files: drag the files to a blank tab on the browser that the file will be opened. With PDF files, you have the option to zoom in and out, print documents or save a file you are reading into a new file.

Open the folder on Windows

Do you know that Chrome can also be used as a file browser on your computer? There may not be many situations where you have to use Chrome for this - because Windows or Mac already has a dedicated file browser; however, you might consider using Chrome as a backup plan when Windows tools crash.

To use Chrome as a file browser, enter C: / into the address bar. To browse files in other drive partitions like D, E . you just need to replace the letter C with the drive name you want to access.

Good luck!
