

After 20 years, Microsoft 'enticed' Samsung to use Word

After 20 years of reliance on its own set of products, Samsung will switch to Microsoft Word on all offices around the globe.

After 20 years of reliance on its own set of products, Samsung will switch to Microsoft Word on all offices around the globe.

Recently, Microsoft CEO , Satya Nadella, visited Korea where he met Samsung's top government and officials. In meetings held with Samsung Vice President, Lee Jae-Yong, Microsoft and Samsung also showed that they are looking to get closer together. Deciding through Microsoft Word instead of JungUm software to use in Samsung's office may be the result of this trend.

Samsung will switch to using Microsoft Word

According to a Samsung press release, Microsoft Office holds nearly 90 percent of the market share and will help make business communication smooth with its partners. Initially, the deployment of Microsoft Word will be limited to Samsung electronics, but will be expanded in all subsidiaries next year.

Samsung JungUm

Moreover, the company has announced that it will continue to support business customers who are using the JungUm program made by Samsung until 2019, while individuals can continue to use the software without support. of the company.

You finished reading the article "After 20 years, Microsoft 'enticed' Samsung to use Word" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.