

After showing disdain for the Covid-19 epidemic, billionaire Elon Musk suddenly changed

Recently, billionaire Elon Musk has become more cautious and concerned about the Covid-19 epidemic.

A few days ago, billionaire Elon Musk emailed all SpaceX employees, saying that the Covid-19 translation was not as disturbing to that extent. He also added that based on what he had learned about the new strain of corona virus, he did not think it was 'among the top 100 health threats in the United States' currently. Earlier in a Twitter post, Elon Musk said that 'this corona virus panic is indeed stupid'.

But recently, it seems that billionaire Elon Musk had to change his mind about the Covid-19 epidemic. According to Business Insider, Elon Musk sent an email to Tesla employees. In it, he said that employees would not have to go to work, if they had symptoms of the disease or were concerned that the Covid-19 epidemic could spread.

Elon Musk said: 'I want to make it clear that if you feel sick or uncomfortable, please do not feel compelled to go to work. Personally, I'm still going to work, but that's just me. Perfect if you want to stay home for any reason.'

Tesla's CEO also said that the company did not have any cases positive for Covid-19, at least until now.

However, Elon Musk still thinks that fear is causing more consequences than the disease itself, because essential items and medical facilities are taken away from some people who really need it. more urgent.

'My frank opinion is still the harm of panic because Covid-19 is more frightening than this disease itself. Elon Musk said that medical resources and essentials are not focused on those who really need it.

But overall, Elon Musk changed his position and became more cautious about the Covid-19 epidemic, compared to when he tweeted on March 6. He also warned his employees not to gather. Practice crowds, to avoid virus spread.

Elon Musk said in an email: 'Most of the threat comes from crowded public places, but you should also be careful with family gatherings.' In addition, billionaire Elon Musk also praised the efforts to control and monitor the disease of the United States.

Reference: Business Insider

You finished reading the article "After showing disdain for the Covid-19 epidemic, billionaire Elon Musk suddenly changed" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.