

All Logitech gaming products are certified carbon neutral

All of the Swiss-made gaming hardware (Logitech Gaming) are made from environmentally-friendly materials, along with global Carbon Neutral certification.

The decision to join the Paris Agreement on the deployment of an environmentally friendly production model in the technology sector was made as an important part of Logitech's new plan to transform strongly into a business. Sustainable and environmentally responsible businesses.

Accordingly, all gaming hardware products (Logitech Gaming) of this Swiss manufacturer are made from environmentally friendly materials, along with production processes certified Carbon Neutral globally.

The amount of CO2 emissions from the production of electronic devices and computer components is also one of the significant factors contributing to exacerbating the climate change situation that is increasingly having negative impacts on the earth. . There have been many international conferences held to discuss this issue, including the priority to use the series of materials that emit less CO2 in the production process, as well as change the production line towards Carbon neutralization is the best option, although there will certainly be certain effects on the companies' existing production lines.

With the move towards environmentally friendly materials as well as neutral carbon production lines, Logitech is becoming the leading flag in the movement to promote environmentally sustainable, sustainable development models in technology world. According to Logitech Gaming's calculations, the carbon footprint during the design, manufacture, packaging, transportation and recycling of products manufactured on carbon neutral processes has been significantly reduced, almost down. net emissions.

In an effort to shift to using most of the neutral carbon materials in its production lines, the technology company has cut more than 17,000 tons of CO2 in its manufacturing operations at its Suzhou factory, China. 2019 to the present, and this number will count there will increase even more in the future.

1. Research: Smart phones are the most destructive factor

You finished reading the article "All Logitech gaming products are certified carbon neutral" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.