

Always respect your parents when they get old, because ....

Here is the touching story of father and son love, always respect your parents when they get old!

An 80-year-old old man is sitting on a sofa in his house with his well-educated 45-year-old son . Suddenly, there was a crow that came flying and landed in the window.

The father turned to ask his son: " What is it? "

The son replied, " It is a crow . "

A few minutes later, the father turned to ask his son the same question: " What is it? "

The son said, " Father, I just told you, 'He is a crow . "

After a while, the old man asked that question a third time: " What is this? "

And now, the son began to show his anger through his voice when he told his father with a rebuttal: " It was a crow, a crow . "

Continued, a moment later the old father asked that question for the fourth time in a gracious voice: " What is this? "

The son shouted at his father at that moment: " Why do you keep asking me the same question even though I told you so many times 'It's a crow.' understand this? "

A moment later, the father went to his room and returned with an old diary in his hand, he had kept it since his son was born.

He gently opened a page in his diary and asked his son to read what was written in it.

The son read, the following words were recorded in the diary:

" Today, my three-year-old son is sitting with me on the sofa, at that moment suddenly there is a crow parked on the window. He asked me 23 times the question: ' What is it? ', And I replied to the boy all 23 times:' It is a raven, I am. 'Every time he repeated that question, I would hug him again. I don't feel angry at all, otherwise I feel more sorry for my innocent child . "

While the boy asked his father 23 times " What is this? ", The father was not a bit irritable, still answering 23 times the same in the same question. Yet, today the old father only asked his son four times in the same question he had felt irritated and annoyed .

So .

If your parents are old, don't deny them or treat them as a burden , but talk to them with kind, calm, polite, humble and considerate words. Be attentive to your birth.

From this day, tell yourself this " I want to see my parents happy forever. Because they were the ones who took care of me since I was a child, always giving me warmth, Their lives have surpassed so many high mountains, deep valleys, ignoring the storms and they have raised me, so that I can become a well-rounded person in society like today " .

Please pray to God that " I will treat my parents in the best way " .

I will always give my parents the best and kind words no matter what they are!

You finished reading the article "Always respect your parents when they get old, because ...." edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.