

Among Us is about to have anonymous votes?

Updating the incognito mode Among Us while voting will help increase the difficulty of the game. This feature is customized and will be available in the upcoming version of Among Us.

In Among Us, the most important time is voting because this is the time to vote to take players off the map. And this is also the most stressful time because people will have to argue with each other to bring up the facts they met.

If all were to make the right decisions to get a member off the map. The gamers who vote will also know that who voted and who voted, everyone will see.

And perhaps the fact that players have voted somewhat makes the game easier and easier to guess. To increase the difficulty of the game, the game developer decided to introduce a hidden voter feature.

Is Among Us's Anonymous feature customizable?

This anonymous feature, who voted Among Us will appear in the upcoming update. You can rest assured that it is not a default option, but will be customized in the game settings. You can set "always", or "just by pressing the meeting button" or "never".

In addition, Among Us may also have many other features in the upcoming version such as color-blind version. Help color-blind players to access the game more easily and do not need to rely on color to distinguish from one another.

The current updated version is available in the beta of Among Us on Steam, so players Among Us iOS and Android may have to wait a little longer. But if you want to try to see what beta Among Us is, download Among Us on your PC and try it out.

You finished reading the article "Among Us is about to have anonymous votes?" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.