

Animoji Karaoke picked up social networks after the iPhone came out, which makes iPhone X worth $ 1000

Pictures from cats, foxes, and pigs to shiit bureau singing the Bohemian Rhapsody song appeared flooding the social network with the name Animoji Karaoke.

Pictures from cats, foxes, and pigs to shit singing Bohemian Rhapsody appeared to flood the social network with the name Animoji Karaoke .

Those who are fortunate to have iPhone X in their hands from the very first day have quickly checked everything they still hear rumors about this phone, from trying to unlock with Face ID to TrueDepth Camera to take pictures. But maybe this is something you didn't expect.

Animoji is an exclusive emoticon set on iPhone X, using TrueDepth Camera to imitate the expression of the user's face in real time.

You can create the Animoji for up to 10 seconds in the Message app, but very soon, Apple fans discovered the screen recording feature to create a longer clip, creating Animoji Karaoke.

This idea originated from journalist Harry McCracken when saying that lip-sync would be fun when Animoji imitated your mouthpiece. Since then similar videos began to spread on social networks.

To create the Animoji Karaoke, you play a video big enough for the iPhone X microphone to hear and sing along. After texting Animoji, touch it then tap Share button to save as video.

Some people also follow a few other steps such as combining multiple clips, editing, adding effects .

Don't forget one thing is to get the interesting Animoji Karaoke video, you will have to do what with your face. Although no one sees it, but don't forget, your face will look like this.
