

AnTuTu announced the 'best value for money' smartphone model in February 2020

Both smartphones worth buying in the February ranking of AnTuTu are devices that are not so popular on the market today.

After announcing the top 10 Android phones with the worst performance in February 2020, AnTuTu has just continued to share a list of the best smartphones for money in China by the end of February, 2020.

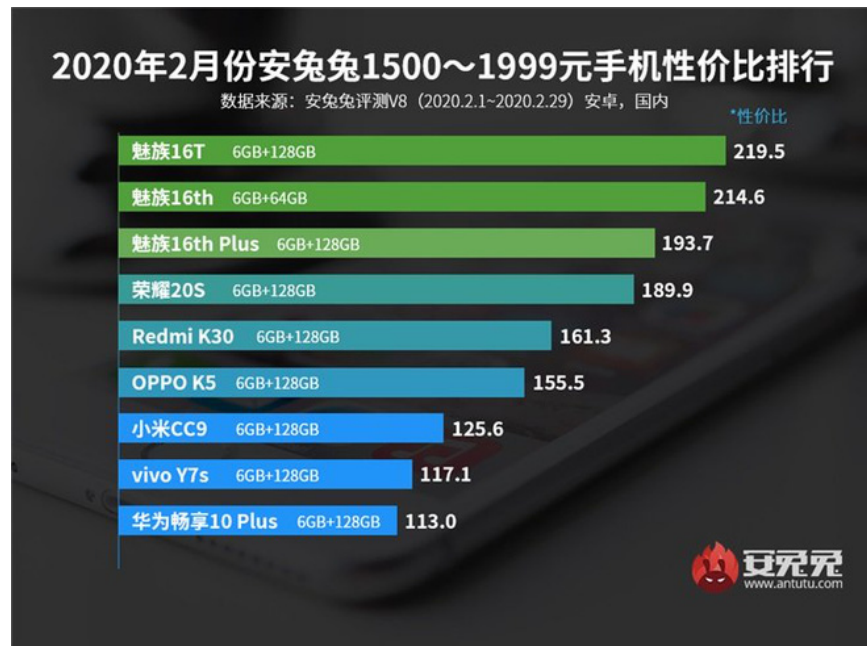

They are classified into two different categories by AnTuTu based on their price range, including devices priced below 1499 yuan (~ 5 million) and smartphone models that range from 1500 to 2000 yuan (~ 5 to 6.7 million dong).

In the price range below 1499 yuan (below 5 million), Honor 9X 4GB RAM + 64GB ROM version is ranked in first place, followed by 6GB RAM + 64GB ROM of Redmi Note 8 Pro in second place and Honor 8X 4GB RAM + 64GB ROM is in third place.

Meanwhile, the fourth place belongs to Redmi Note 8 Pro with 4GB RAM + 64GB ROM. Other devices in the top 10 smartphones "worth the money" for less than 1499 yuan (~ 5 million) are Meizu 16X (6GB RAM + 64GB), Realme X (6GB RAM + 64GB), Realme X2 (6GB RAM + 64GB version), Honor 8X (4GB RAM + 64GB version), Vivo Z5x (6GB RAM + 128GB version) and finally the Redmi Note 7 Pro (6GB RAM + 128GB ROM).

In the price range from 1500 to 2000 yuan (~ 5 to 6.7 million), the most worthy smartphone is Meizu 16T version 6GB RAM + 128GB ROM, a phone not so popular on the market today. Meanwhile, Meizu 16 (6GB RAM + 64GB version) and Meizu 16 Plus (6GB RAM + 128GB version) take second and third place respectively.

Other phones ranked in the top 10 smartphones "worth the money" in the price segment above are Honor 20S (6GB RAM + 128GB), Redmi K30 (6GB RAM + 128GB), OPPO K5 (6GB version RAM + 128GB), Mi CC9 (6GB RAM + 128GB), Vivo Y7s (6GB RAM + 128GB) and finally Huawei Enjoy 10 Plus (6GB RAM + 128GB ROM).
