

Apple acquired the iPhone and iPad with water

According to Apple Insider, with the Reuse and Recycling Program, Apple will re-purchase damaged iPhone, iPad, MacBook or Mac models. Users can exchange each waterlogged product for a coupon to purchase new Apple products and accessories.

Those who miss hands on the iPhone, iPad can now "remove gauze" a little bit from Apple.

According to Apple Insider, with the Reuse and Recycling Program , Apple will re-purchase damaged iPhone, iPad, MacBook or Mac models. Users can exchange each waterlogged product for a coupon to purchase new Apple products and accessories.

Compared to older models, the value of the water-injected models does not decrease too much. For example, the old iPhone 5 will be purchased for $ 265 (about 5.6 million), but if it gets water, the price will be only 235 USD (about 5 million). The old iPad 2 costs $ 126 (about 2.7 million) but if it gets wet, it will only cost 96 USD (about 2 million VND).

All the money will be converted into an Apple purchase card. Currently, this program has been available in many countries, including China, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Singapore but has not included Vietnam.

You finished reading the article "Apple acquired the iPhone and iPad with water" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.