

Apple iOS 11 turns your face into a pile of shit, believe it or not

After months of watching and looking forward to leaking information about the iPhone 8, we finally received a bit of information, just a few days before the official launch.

After months of watching and looking forward to leaking information about the iPhone 8, we finally received a bit of information, just a few days before the official launch.

In the leaked Golden Master build of iOS 11, members on page 9to5Mac have found some interesting new features, including 3D animated emoji named Animoji.

But that's just the beginning. According to the initial 'surveys' from this page, the emoji are created using different emotional expressions on your own face when looking at the phone camera.

Very funny emoji icon from the very expression on your face

That means you can create a shoji-shaped shit with just your correct expression, as well as robot-shaped emoji, monkeys, aliens, horses, cats, dogs, foxes, rabbits, raccoons, horses 1 horns and dogs.

Based on the leaked information, emoji can be further customized such as raising eyebrows, winking, glancing, puffing cheeks and many other movements of the mouth and chin.

Create many other emoji based on facial expressions

Animoji is called 'customizable dynamic messages that reflect the expression on your face' and will be created in the Messenger application. Most importantly, information leaked that Animoji will be available only on the new OLED version of the iPhone, using face tracking technology.

You finished reading the article "Apple iOS 11 turns your face into a pile of shit, believe it or not" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.