A rather interesting information has just appeared on Digitimes yesterday, said Apple is about to unveil a new version of the ultra-thin MacBook Air, a popular mobile device with a small screen only 11.6 inches.

MacBook Air is about to have a miniature version.

Digitimes also said 'Apple' is also preparing to offer a new iPod Touch music player using A4 processor integrated in the iPhone 4 and iPad tablet phones. The information was revealed by Apple component makers in Taiwan, including Quanta Computer.

Both products will be available in the second half of this year, with the iPod Touch player coming out in August or September.

The new MacBook Air will be equipped with an 11.6-inch screen, and the design of this new laptop is even thinner and lighter than the 'elder'. It is equipped with Intel Core super-power processor. It seems that Apple has changed its notion of netbooks even before it vigorously criticized the mini-laptops running Windows operating systems. Apple's current MacBook Air has a 13.3-inch screen.

According to Digitimes, iPod Touch music player owns 3 megapixel camera and A4 chip set.

DigiTimes also made predictions about the sales of these upcoming products. Accordingly, in 2010, Apple will sell 17-18 million new iPod Touch, but MacBook Air sales are only modest at 400,000 units.

After two years of market launch without improvement, upgrade, the ultra-thin MacBook Air laptop was gradually forgotten when new competing products appeared, especially Dell Adamo XPS rival. . The biggest obstacle to the MacBook Air for personal users is the selling price. The price of 1,800 USD has caused many customers to regret being cheap because of insufficient budget to buy, even when Apple lowered the price of MacBook Air to 1,500 USD, the situation was not satisfactory.
