

Apple launches new professional music editing software

Apple recently released Logic Pro X - a professional audio editing software for Mac users.

Apple recently released Logic Pro X - a professional audio editing software for Mac users.

Logic Pro X is now available on the Mac App Store for $ 199, selling at the same price as Logic Pro 9. New users or users of Logic Pro 9 must pay this fee to own it without a discount when upgrading.

Logic Pro X is refreshed by Apple on the user interface, while adding some features. In particular, the most notable feature is the " Drummer " feature - a set of virtual drum effects capable of playing along with the song; Flex Pitch function helps edit the sound quality of the song; And Logic Remote allows you to control Logic Pro X from iPad.

The MainStage application is also updated by Apple in this new version. MainStage is an application that lets you play high-quality sound effects like in a studio in live concerts - via a Mac computer.

MainStage 3 also refreshes the interface and is compatible with many plug-ins and control tools in Logic Pro X. This software costs $ 29.99. Also Remote Logic utility is released for free on the App Store for iOS devices.

You finished reading the article "Apple launches new professional music editing software" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
