

Apple Store worldwide closes because of COVID-19 epidemic

From now until March 27, Apple Store worldwide (except China) will be closed to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

In a latest move to stem the spread of the COVID-19 epidemic, Apple has recently announced it will close all Apple Stores around the world, except China.

The Apple announcement comes in a letter written by CEO Tim Cook about the company's response to the COVID-19 translation. Thereby, all Apple Store (except in China) will be closed from now until March 27. This is a very tough decision for Apple, because the Apple Store is a very attractive place and plays an extremely important and important role directly affecting Apple revenue.

Apple Store worldwide is closed because of COVID-19

Although the Apple Store is closed, Apple said its online businesses will continue as normal. Users can order Apple products on the online store and ship them to your home. If you need assistance, they can contact Apple through the website or telephone exchange.

Along with the closure of the Apple Store, Apple recently announced it would cancel the developer conference (WWDC 2020) and replace it with an online event. WWDC is the event that Apple announced new software versions, including iOS 14, macOS 10.16 or watchOS 7. In addition, according to some sources, Apple also canceled the launch event of new hardware products. (iPhone 9, iPad Pro 2020 .) in March.

Not stopping there, Apple will also donate at least $ 15 million to help minimize the damage caused by COVID-19. Apple also recently launched a special section on COVID-19 on the Apple News app, helping users capture the latest and most accurate information.

Previously, Apple had informed its investors that its revenue would be affected by the COVID-19 epidemic, when Apple and its Chinese factories were closed, as well as User demand has declined.

You finished reading the article "Apple Store worldwide closes because of COVID-19 epidemic" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.