Not as grandiose as Asus, Acer introduced at CeBIT, its 10-inch Aspire One D150 netbook has been exposed for quite some time.

Not as grandiose as Asus, Acer introduced at CeBIT, its 10-inch Aspire One D150 netbook has been around for quite some time .

The second Acer netbook with 10.1-inch screen, while the previous model is 8.9 inches.

The screen is wider, which means the keyboard area, the larger touchpad.

The buttons on the keyboard are comfortable to use.

Screen with a resolution of 1024 x 600 pixels.

Still in the middle of the shadow like the first version.

Acer said that this model costs less than 400 USD, much cheaper than the same configuration and size machines.

Better with red model.

It runs on Atom N280 processor, Windows XP operating system, 160 GB hard drive.

Connection ports on the side
