

Asus sells the quad-core K53TK Fusion laptop in Japan

Products using AMD's AP-A820 APU have a 1.6GHz CPU, integrated Radeon HD 6620G graphics and an additional Radeon HD 7670M discrete graphics card.

Products using AMD's AP-A820 APU have a 1.6GHz CPU, integrated Radeon HD 6620G graphics and an additional Radeon HD 7670M discrete graphics card.

Asus's new product is equipped with Radeon HD 6620G graphics integrated with Radeon HD 7670M discrete card. (Photo: Notebookcheck).

According to Notebookcheck , Asus started selling the K53TK-SX0A8 laptop from today. It uses an AMD A8-3520M quad-core processor clocked at 1.6GHz and has a starting price of about 79,800 yen (about 980 USD).

Asus K53TK uses Radeon HD 6620G integrated graphics and Radeon HD 7670M discrete card. It has a 15.6-inch LED screen with a resolution of 1,366 x 768 pixels. This model is equipped with 8GB of RAM, a 750GB 5,400-rpm hard drive that can be expanded up to 1TB, a DVD burner with external speakers Altec Lansing. In addition, Asus K53TK also integrates two USB 2.0 ports, two USB 3.0 ports, D-SUB, HDMI, FireWire connections, card reader and 1.3 Megapixel webcam.

Asus products have a weight of 2.7kg and come with batteries that can work continuously for 4 hours. It runs Windows 7 Home Premium operating system.

You finished reading the article "Asus sells the quad-core K53TK Fusion laptop in Japan" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
