After leaving the position of Chairman of Microsoft in 2014 and only holding the technical advisory position for Microsoft, Bill Gates had more time to spend. for yourself and your family. The work at the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is also numerous, but still not as good as when I worked at Microsoft. Basically, Bill Gates is quite a quiet and simple person but at times and things he wants to do, he invests to the end. Especially for basic needs in life such as eating, living, traveling, traveling, hobbies . this billionaire over 60 years old is very generous.

In fact, Bill Gates himself doesn't want to show his private life to people around the world. Because in his capacity as Chairman of a giant company like Microsoft and also the owner of 84 billion USD assets ( measured in December 2016 ) for many years ranked as the richest man in the world, he You have to face the newspaper all day. Curiosity is one of the basic instincts of human beings, so surely everyone wants to know the private life of the richest person in the world, right?

Through the facts we know more about Bill Gates' life, he seems to be " an odd child " when he demonstrates the ability to jump over a chair during a TV interview or founder. Private study schedule to be in classes with "good looking " girls. In Bill's words, his only " loud fanfare " is the possession of a villa called Xanadu 2.0 and a luxury aircraft .

Bill owns an extravagant mansion located on a hill overlooking Lake Washington in Medina, Washington. Xanadu 2.0 super villa is named after the fictional house in the movie " Citizen Kane ", with an area of ??over 6131m <sup>2</sup> and integrating a lot of high-tech equipment. To complete this unique project, billionaire Bill spent 7 years at a cost of over US $ 63 million and was valued at US $ 145 million in 2009.

Although there have not been any official polls in the " World's smartest house " category, but for many technology fans, it belongs to Xanadu 2.0 - Gates' most ostentatious asset. This villa is a combination of many connected buildings that can manage themselves thanks to advanced technical technologies equipped everywhere with a central server and hundreds of small computers. So homeowners and visitors can control everything from the lighting system, the room temperature to the hairpins they will wear through a small pin. In addition, there is a sound system hidden behind the wallpaper, which will follow your every step when moving in the house thanks to the beautiful baby speakers. Besides, the former chairman of Microsoft also owns the largest island in Belize, Central America.

In addition to housing, Bill Gates also spends a lot of money on traveling. Bill Gates owns a private jet of the Bombardier BD-700 Global Express aircraft worth about $ 40 million; Of course luxury and comfort several hundred times more than the world's civilian aircraft. Bombardier has the ability to fly nonstop in 6,759 km with supersonic speed. Bill Gates often uses this aircraft for charitable missions to Africa, as part of his work at the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation or for family vacations.

Besides, Bill Gates also owns a huge collection of cars - crazy fans of Porsche cars . The first Porsche he used was 911 Carrera , followed by rare lines like 1988 - 959 Coupe or 930 Turbo. The exceptionally rare 959 Coupe has 337 versions ever produced around the world. Rumor has it that Bill Gates used his influence to influence the US Congress when Congress issued a law to "forgive" his Porsche 959. Because 959 Porsche was banned from circulation in the US because it did not meet safety standards.

It can be said that the problem of mobility is particularly concerned by Bill Gates. Because in addition to private aircraft, car collection, he spent $ 5 million to rent the luxury "super yacht" in 2014. As a leader of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Bill must travel the world. not to mention that he often brought his wife and children to visit many famous tourist sites like Rome, Belize, Croatia, Antarctica.

A book lover, especially printed books, at Xanadu 2.0 villa Bill Gates has a huge library of many different titles, including extremely rare books. In 1994, Bill Gates used to spend $ 30.8 million to buy Codex Leicester - the collection of the sixteenth-century scientific manuscript by researcher and researcher Leonardo da Vinci. In addition, Bill also owns many other manuscripts of Abraham Lincoln and many other famous great men.

Not only is the person who earns money, Bill also knows how to spend money, spend for himself and spend for all mankind. Right now, any topic that discusses Bill Gates' spending without mentioning the world's largest charity, Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, is worth $ 27 billion. The foundation was founded in January 2000 due to the merger of the Gates Study Encouragement Fund and the William H. Gates Foundation, with the aim of improving health care, reducing poverty globally and increasing learning opportunities, and access to advanced information technology in the US In 2014, Ask Me Anything on reddit.com, Bill Gates explained that: " He feels extremely interested in charity. Fund The charity he founded will focus on health, education, science . "

What he is doing with the charity Bill and Melinda Gates shows that he is still as brave and courageous as the early days of Microsoft establishment and development. Bill and his charity have publicly announced that they will eliminate polio for all humanity. Bill's work is now less ambitious, but the results have a tremendous impact on the world; including the invention and allocation of new vaccines, revolutionizing the condom manufacturing industry, the method of birth control and the development of clean water resources.

Bill and Melinda Gates not only wanted to give away their money, but also wanted other billionaires to join hands. The more money is contributed, the more effective the fight against diseases worldwide. This effort has received the support of the super rich - the world's richest group built by Bill Gates, his wife Melinda and close friend Warren Buffett. Investor Warren Buffett and 80 other billionaires have pledged to donate part of their assets to charity.

Like Bill Gates, Buffett is one of the few eccentric people in the world's richest class. Buffet lives in a 6,000m<sup>2</sup> mansion in Omaha, since 2007, this billionaire has only driven the Lincoln Town 2001. In a sense, Buffett could consider the second Bill Gates when he did not mention. to some of the grandeur of this property. In the first meeting in 1995, Buffet and Bill Gates embarked on a very dramatic hypothetical controversy. At that time, Buffett also called the former journalist of Washington Post - Meg Greenfield stood back to witness the "war" between the two and because of politeness, so Meg stayed. Surprisingly, the two became good friends later. Even so close, Buffett agreed to donate to Bill Gates' $ 4 billion private charity over the past 10 years.

Although he was over 60, Bill Gates was still a dreamer and wanted to challenge it all. The biggest goal on Bill Gates' current dream list is "not dead" and the biggest regret is not knowing any language other than English (mother tongue). Although he is living a rich and happy life, Bill thinks that "it is selfish" when rich people only use money to live longer.

In addition to technical advisory work at Microsoft and charitable foundation, Bill often uses his remaining free time to play tennis, read books and explore interesting places around the house with children like collecting money. Collect indiscriminate dumping sites, power plants, missile vaults and scientific locations such as the Large Hadron Collider (LHC).

In the family, Bill Gates is a faithful husband, strict father. He, like Buffett, gave at least half of his assets to charity. So many people wonder, how will Bill Gates eventually leave his children with money? In contrast to Paris Hilton, Bill Gates' children are allowed to "freely do anything, except to take money to express themselves because it will make them become only knowledgeable, do not know what to do". Bill Gates' children will not be billionaires, but at least they can manipulate the best of the world from his father, one of the richest people in the world.

As the richest man on the planet, the vast majority of assets are charitable, Bill Gates only left each of his children 10 million USD. This can be a huge amount for most of us, but compared to the amount of money Bill Gates has just like "the sand in the desert". So what makes the billionaire decide "stingy" with his children like that?

In an interview with Dailymail, Bill Gates shared: " That amount is only a very small part of my total assets. This means the kids will have to walk on their own feet. Amount it will ensure that they are educated and will definitely solve whatever health-related problems, but to earn income, they will have to choose for themselves a job to do like any other adult ".

Besides, Bill Gates also shared how to educate his children. He said his children enjoyed a fairly normal life like other children. They have to help their parents do housework in return for a small allowance and go to church every Sunday, travel with their parents and have to wait until the age of 13 to own a mobile phone.

In particular, former Microsoft president said he always tried to fulfill his fatherly role and orient them to not be too much dominated by the wealth of assets he owned. Therefore, even though he was busy, he always tried to spend time with his family, with his children playing sports or going on a picnic.

It can be said that Bill Gates is the richest man on the planet, so Bill owns the lavish things that ordinary people never dare to dream about. The admirable thing about Bill Gates is that he always spends most of his money on others, always towards the poor with the desire to help this world be more beautiful. That is the beauty of the soul, not just any billionaire.
