TipsMake.com - Although devices like iPhone and Android dominate the market, however, the BlackBerry phone in the business world is like a Reseach In Motion phone carrying more data than a flashy screen. .

On Monday, a company announced BlackBerry Protect, a free application that allows users to access via the web when they lose their phones or even stolen phones. This application allows phones that can work with GPS connections to send, receive information and will display on anyone's screen searching, supporting, locking or expanding any data. It can also create alert sounds to find the phone even when the phone is in a silent state.

Many functions have reached BlackBerry users through the BlackBerry Enterprise Server. However, BlackBerry Protect also opens up safety functions for customers and small businesses who don't access the server. At the same time, new functions in applications such as GPS help users to interact quickly when lost or stolen phones without contacting the information technology department.

BlackBerry phones have also provided these features before: Find It, GetIt Back, and Berry Locator. However, BlackBerry Protect is free and supported by Reseach In Motion is a good choice
