The official website of the University of Cambridge has recently posted information about the opening of a free online textbook store during the outbreak of the Covid-19 outbreak, namely until the end of May 2020. This is a rare opportunity for people to refer to reputable and useful resources.

The Cambridge University curriculum includes over 700 courses in various fields such as mathematics, physics, engineering, earth sciences, social sciences and humanities.

Anyone can access these textbooks for free, including books purchased before the end of May and can only be viewed online and not downloaded.

Cambridge University only supports the learning resources for students and grants each student an account at the library to study online. Therefore, it is not easy for students outside of Cambridge University to access books with low circulation and expensive prices.

The fact that Cambridge University makes public its resources is rare and is a valuable resource for students across the globe for distance learning.

These documents are in HTML format and for the best experience viewers are advised to use a laptop or desktop computer with Google Chrome.
