

Can you see who saved your TikTok videos?

Have you ever wondered if you want to find out if someone has saved or downloaded your TikTok videos to your device?

Want to know if TikTok can send notifications when it detects that someone is recording your video screen?

Does TikTok let you know who saves your videos?

Unfortunately no, TikTok does not currently offer a feature that allows you to see who downloads your videos. Anyone can download your video to their phone, and you won't be notified of it at all.

If you want to download someone's video and worry that they will know, don't worry. TikTok platform administrators may have analytics related to your video downloads, but they can't know exactly who made those downloads, or they simply don't want to provide this information.

In return, you can see who liked your video. If you also have profile viewing turned on, you'll also get notifications about who's visited your profile.

Does TikTok notify when someone screenshots your video?

Again, TikTok will not notify when someone is recording your video screen. For instance, someone recording their iPhone or Android phone screen while watching your video and making an 'unauthorized' copy of the video, but you won't get any notification about that. This is not an uncommon situation.

How to stop people from downloading your TikTok videos

If you want to prevent people from saving your TikTok videos, the app offers an option to turn off content downloads. This feature is usually enabled by default. When activated, it will remove the option to save videos, preventing people from downloading your videos.

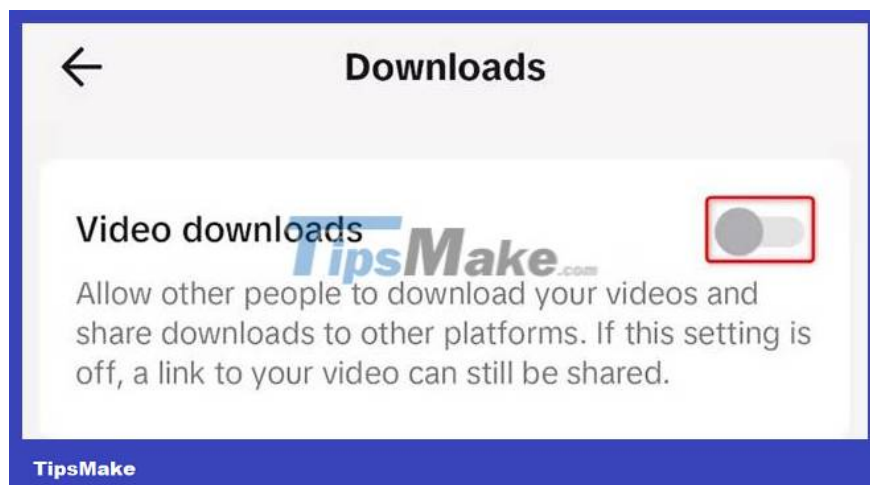

To enable this feature, first open the TikTok app on your phone and select ' Profile ' in the bottom bar.

In the upper-right corner of your profile page, tap the hamburger menu (three horizontal lines) and select "Settings and Privacy".

Go to 'Privacy' menu > Download. Here, turn off the 'Video Downloads' option to prevent people from saving your videos.

Hope you have a good experience with TikTok.

You finished reading the article "Can you see who saved your TikTok videos?" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
