

Casino House Edge: What is That?

We have all seen casinos providing generous bonuses and rewards for loyal and new patrons. One might wonder how do these online casinos maintain a profit margin while offering these exciting rewards and bonuses? The answer lies in the idea of Casino House edge.

To simply put it, Casino House edge refers to the statistical advantage the house (the casino) holds over the player, which does not change no matter what game the player plays. This ensures the casino steady profit over the games they offer over time. Players are encouraged to look out for a higher casino edge which would imply less of their money is deducted when they play. A lower edge implies a higher amount of the player's money is deducted when they from the huge range of games online casinos offer.

The aim of these top-rated and reliable online casinos at Casino Deps list is to make the player come back regularly to their casino to play the wide variety of games they offer. To do that, the casino need not win higher profits in the short term; the only way they make profits is when the player continues for a long time, regularly. This is when the casino house edge helps the casino secure handsome profits.

House Edge: In Which Game?

Amongst all the genres of online casino games available on the internet, the following games have a higher house edge which means the casino still makes a good profit yet the player does not lose out on their bonuses.

1. American Roulette- 5.26%
2. Baccarat- 1.01-15.75%
3. Blackjack- 0.5%
4. Craps- 0-16.67%
5. Keno- 20-40%
6. Slots- 2- 15%
7. Video Poker- 0.46%
8. Caribbean Stud- 5.22%
9. Hold'em- 2.36%
10. Sic Bo- 2.78

These are the approximate average house edge values that online casinos impose (although these may vary from casino to casino) In some cases like Baccarat games the player gets 1.24% and the Banker gets 1.06%. Seasoned players take advantage of these average House Edge numbers to play efficiently ensuring they win bigger rewards than the casinos during the short term of their play. Games like Keno, SicBo are difficult games to spin around to make profits. They usually yield higher profits to the casino house.

What is the Grind?

Grind refers to the number of times the player re-bets to win bigger profits. The house edge policy applies to the amount the player bets on during the game they play and not to the base amount the player starts with. The player does win about bigger profits during gameplay but in a chance of probability, the player does lose out a couple of rounds. The repeated re-betting done by the player to win back their lost amount refers to the grind made by the casino house edge. Amateur players are hence advised to play out games with lower house edges for shorter periods to ensure they end up with a considerable amount of profit.

Popular Games with Higher House Edge

Games like Blackjack, Craps, Roulette, Pokies, Video Poker are some games with higher house edge which implies players walk out with a comparatively higher amount of profit.

When it comes to Blackjack, it is one of the most popular games of the Blackjack average house edge. It requires a good hand and a good grip over probability to make steady profits out of this game.

In a game of Craps, it is a comparatively easier game to play where the profit control lies with the player- with the number of bets put across to conduct a game of Craps. Players are encouraged to know their bets well to make a profit.

Games like Slot games, roulettes, Video game poker offer an average chance for the player to break even after house edge is applied on their bets. Slot games wildly vary from game to game where they have a high house edge but sometimes few slot games have a lower than average house edge making it rather difficult for players to discern their chances of making a profit through slot games and otherwise.

Concluding Thoughts

Players cannot essentially escape the Casino House edge, no matter which game they play. Yet if played smartly with the knowledge of smartly varying house edges over different genres of online casino games available, players can secure a good amount of profit which would ensure their steady patronage over online gambling which in turn would mean higher profits for online casinos through this simple concept of Casino house edge.
