

CEO RIM Thorsten Heins promises a laptop death

In a recent interview with The New York Times, RIM CEO Thorsten Heins continued to express confidence in the BlackBerry 10 operating system that they will launch early next year.

In a recent interview with The New York Times, RIM CEO Thorsten Heins continued to express confidence in the BlackBerry 10 operating system that they will launch early next year.

The captain at Canadian technology firm confirmed that in the next 3 to 5 years, the new BlackBerry platform will "death" laptop.

'Whenever you go to the office, ignore the laptop, because you have the power of mobile computing,' said CEO Heins, pointing at a BlackBerry 10 smartphone, 'You won't need it. to the laptop within 3-5 years. '

Expected, on January 30, RIM will hold a press conference to launch a new platform that promises to help them get rid of the current quagmire.

Previously, the CEO of BlackBerry maker had created a controversy when he was confident that it was still not bad for them, even though now on the market, consumers mostly think of iPhone. or Android smartphone whenever you intend to buy a new smartphone.

You finished reading the article "CEO RIM Thorsten Heins promises a laptop death" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

