Changing League of Legends VNG servers is a question many players ask when they first download LOL VNG. When you create a League of Legends VNG account, you can choose a server in many different regions such as North America, Singapore, EU, etc.

When you log into that account in League of Legends VNG, the system automatically identifies your server. This is also the reason for lag during gameplay. That's why you might want to switch to a different server. You can also change your playing region to the region you're currently visiting to reduce lag.

You can absolutely switch servers in League of Legends VNG as many times as you like. Follow the instructions below to switch League of Legends VNG servers.

How to check your current VNG League of Legends server

Step 1: To check your League of Legends server region, simply hover your mouse over your profile picture. Your profile picture will then appear along with your online status. The server will be displayed next to your character's name, as shown in the image below (#NA1).

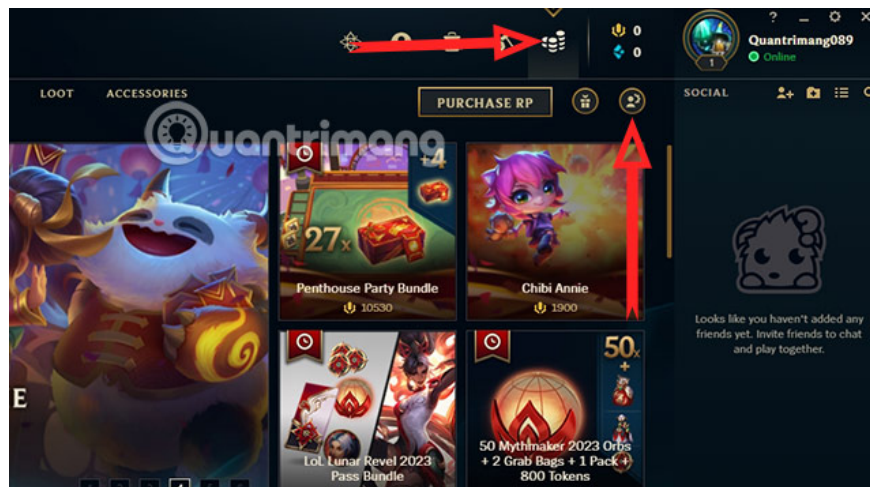

How to switch League of Legends VNG servers, change League of Legends VNG servers

The easiest way to change your region in League of Legends is to create a new account. It will take you about 5 minutes, and then you can start playing with friends in the Vietnam region immediately.

1. Disadvantage: Creating a new account means starting from scratch. Unlike switching accounts, you won't be able to transfer any progress, RP, or anything else you have to your new account.
2. Advantage: You don't need to spend extra money to change your region in the game.
