Experience buying used iPhone

Buying a cheap, quality used iPhone is something everyone wants. Currently, there are many places on the market that sell used iPhones, but the reality is that not all places sell genuine, quality products. To buy a used iPhone at a good price with guaranteed quality, immediately refer to the 7 experiences below.

Check the old iPhone's appearance before buying

The appearance of an iPhone is what we most easily check. However, you also need to be careful when buying a used iPhone. You need to pay attention to the contours, corners, and edges of the device. See if the iPhone's case, lid, or screen are scratched, dented, warped, or open? If the case is dented, it is likely that the iPhone was dropped or had a strong impact. At this time, the quality of the machine may no longer be good because strong impacts will affect the components inside the machine.

Check the frame, headphone and charger slots, and screws on the device

Many people ignore details such as the headphone slot, charging slot, and screws on the iPhone. But these are the details that clearly show whether the old iPhone is still original or has been disassembled and repaired. Usually, an old iPhone that is still intact at the interface between the screen and the frame will not be warped or cracked. The headphone and charging slots are not too scratched. The screws on the device still have the gold plating intact and are not scratched, which proves that the iPhone has not been "stamped".

Check the old iPhone screen

The iPhone screen will directly affect the user experience. Therefore, before buying a used iPhone you need to carefully check the screen. Choose a device with a screen size that suits your needs. If you use it for entertainment and watch movies a lot, you should choose an old iPhone with a slightly larger screen. If you want convenient and compact use, choose an iPhone with a moderately small screen. Normally iPhone Plus versions will have larger screen sizes. In addition, you need to carefully check whether the screen glass has scratches or not? Is it cracked? Does the iPhone touch screen have dead spots? Is the touch screen sensitive and freezing?

Check if the iPhone has been replaced or not

In many cases, old iPhones are scratched or severely dented and have to be replaced. To recognize this, you can press *#06# if the IMEI number appears, check if this number matches the number on the back, sim tray or not? If it matches, it means the original iPhone has not been repaired.

Check the origin of your old iPhone

You can check the origin of your old iPhone by going to Settings > General > about. In the model section, a code snippet will be displayed that includes the symbol of the distribution market. For example: Code LL/A is a product distributed in the US; ZA is the product code for the Singapore market; Hong Kong (China) uses the symbol ZP...

Check your device's iCloud

If iCloud is locked, your iPhone is like a brick. Therefore, you need to make sure the old owner's iCloud has been completely logged out. To check this, you just need to go to Apple's homepage, enter the IMEI number to check the Activation Lock status. If the system gives the result Off, the user can rest assured.

Check out other features on iPhone

Users need to check the Home button, increase or decrease the volume, and try charging the device to see if the charging slot is damaged or not. Plug in headphones, try listening to calls to check microphone, internal speaker, external speaker. Check the device's sensors, sound wave quality, try inserting the SIM card to listen to calls. Access wifi to try connecting to the internet.
