

Coming soon with singing competition between users on Facebook

It seems that Facebook is developing a new feature called 'Talent Show' which enables users to show off their singing and testing talents to other Facebook users.

It seems that Facebook is developing a new feature called 'Talent Show' which enables users to show off their singing and testing talents to other Facebook users.

The developer Jane Manchun Wong discovered in the application code an interface that allows users to choose a popular song, then record their own voice and send it to the judging panel.

This feature is not for personal accounts but only on sites. Therefore, the site administrator can actively launch the contest for members of the participating site.

Talent Show promises to create an exciting singing competition among Facebook users. Not only benefits users with the opportunity to express themselves but also helps Facebook attract more users.

Earlier, in March, Facebook signed a music licensing contract with three major brands, Warner, Universal and Sony, to use licensed music in videos posted by users on Facebook. Therefore, we have a basis to believe that this feature will soon be available in the future.

See more:

1. How does Facebook configure millions of servers every day?
2. How to see what your lover is doing on Facebook
3. Facebook is developing the Internet satellite and will launch in early 2019

4. Facebook users will be able to try clothes right on the News Feed

You finished reading the article "Coming soon with singing competition between users on Facebook" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
