Computer mouse is one of the most important accessories ever invented in the field of technology in particular and in life in general, contributing to creating a new wave of electronic interaction when it was first released. First. But what if we imagine further? Maybe the case of YouTuber Electronic Grenade, the person who turned what seemed impossible, was making a mouse that could not only control a computer, but in fact it was a machine. Mini calculator with full functionality, complete with integrated screen and keyboard (connected via motherboard).

1. HP launched a new mouse, providing a fingerprint security solution for the PC

According to the detailed information published by Electronic Grenade, this device is made up of a custom designed and 3D printed computer mouse case, inside this case contains the Raspberry Pi Zero W, along with the feel. Variables are taken from separate computer mice. However, what makes this product so impressive is the 1.5-inch OLED screen mounted above, along with a small Bluetooth keyboard that bounces off the Raspberry Pi case in a very cute way. This interesting design turned the Electronic Grenade mouse into a fully functional miniature computer.

This product, after being completed, will have a slightly larger volume than a traditional mouse, but in terms of size there are not too many differences, this is an impressive effort of the author. Also, since this mouse is in fact a Raspberry Pi Zero, it can still run anything you still use as a compact PC - even Minecraft (in about 15 seconds until freezing).

Youtuber Electronic Grenade promises to release a detailed video description of the process as well as how to make this strange mouse at home. If you also want to create such a product yourself, or subscribe to follow the YouTube channel of Electronic Grenade to wait until the video tutorial is released.
